

Acton Park Busy Spot on Sunday

ANOTHER FINE CONCERT was enjoyed at Acton Park last Sunday by the many people present. The band in their colorful uniforms played a variety of numbers from overtures to rousing marches. A larger drum section is being added to the band and will add to the already fine organization of musicians.

STAND CLEAR, here comes a ringer, exclaims Pat Waldie as he and his partner, Doug Mason, enjoy a game of horseshoes at Acton Park. Like a little beehive of industry, the park is a busy spot on week-ends with horseshoes being one of the activities flourishing. Last Sunday patrons of the park were serenaded by the fine music of Acton Citizens' Band.

ENJOYING THE NEW diving pier at Fairy Lake, boys and girls are busy these days, courtesy of the Acton Y's Men's Club, who supplied the pier. The diving pier is one of the many projects completed or planned for the park by the service club.

AW, COME ON, let's be friendly, seems to be the thoughts of Lucky, a three-month-old Collie, owned by William Crystall, of Long Branch, as he greets Penny, a seven-year-old Boston Terrier owned by H. Holmes, Acton. Mr. Crystall and family were visitors in the Acton Park last Sunday.

Says Most Women Like Light Movie

Halifax (CP) — A Nova Scotia theatre survey indicates that women like their movie entertainment in a lighter vein rather than scenes of violence.

In addition, more women attend movies than men. Seven of 11 Nova Scotia theatres reported larger female audiences, three had larger male audiences and one called it even.

But in the "cowboy and lajun"-type movie, male theatre patrons came into their own. Of the three theatres reporting larger male audiences, most of their pictures were "wild west" types.

"When it comes to ducking stray bullets, the women would rather stay home in the kitchen," one manager said.

Explaining the larger female audiences generally, another manager suggested that women like to get out at night while the man of the house wants to relax by his television set.

A 28-year-old Polish diplomat in London has been granted asylum in Britain after telling police how he sidestepped a Communist move to ship him back to his red-ruled homeland.

Mieczyslaw Regula, assistant to the Polish commercial attache in London, came out of four days' hiding and the Home Office said he may stay in Britain. He was to have sailed to Poland on Sunday, revealed after his embassy chiefs had turned him in as a suspected sympathizer with the West.

The London Daily Mail quoted Regula as saying that his blonde wife Malgorza was a Communist fanatic who spied on him in their quarters at the embassy. Regula said he told her that he would not live with her again, and that she went back to Poland with their two-year-old daughter. Their son stayed in London with his father.

Regula said a friend tipped him off that the Communists knew he planned to seek asylum. He grabbed his son, made a dash past embassy officials to a waiting taxi. Detectives watched from a distance and saw Regula jump into the taxi after brushing aside a Polish woman. Police agents questioned him on the sidewalk.

Disarmament Talks

If the United Nations disarmament subcommittee's talks in London drag on much longer, many of the technical staffs may find themselves needed in two places at once.

The London five-power talks already have lasted five months, and if they go on another three weeks they might collide with the convening of the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

The assembly usually meets the third Tuesday in September, but this year it is expected to go into special session a week earlier to consider another subcommittee report on the Hungarian revolt.

The technical staffs of the London disarmament conference is being handled by some 80 members of the U.N. secretariat, under D. Dragoslav Plotic, undersecretary for Security Council affairs.

The prospect of a conflict in assignments led to speculation in western quarters that the disarmament conference, if it continues, might be shifted to New York later this year.

Defence of Queen

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express sprang to the support of the Queen against criticism by two poets. It called the British author.

Alberta Scientists Study Cosmic Rays

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Perched precariously on the granite peak of Sulphur Mountain at Banff, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, is a compact laboratory directed by Dr. H. G. Wilson.

The most spectacular of the research stations located throughout Alberta to take part in the International Geophysical Year, which started July 1, the small structure, 7,500 feet above sea level, houses thousands of dollars worth of fragile and specially constructed equipment designed by the National Research Council.

The study of cosmic rays is the main objective of the station, one of four in Canada involved in cosmic study, and one of 50 such stations in the world program.

The use of Alberta as a location for a number of I.G.Y. experiments, observation stations and bureaus has been credited to its topographical peculiarities which lend themselves to their location.

roy "a liability to the nation". The Daily Mail at the same time writes off the 18-year-old Marquis of Londonderry as "a yea-man and a copycat" for echoing the views of Lord Altrincham on the royal court.

The two articles brought a new note into the editorial battle over the royal family that developed since Lord Altrincham started Britain with his original attack on the Queen two weeks earlier, when he wrote in a magazine article that she speaks like a "spriggle school girl" and is surrounded by too many upper class advisers.

Lord Londonderry entered the row with a letter to the New Statesman and Nation denouncing the traditional handling of royalty as "indignantly and nauseatingly incongruous in a modern democracy."

The two-page magazine was immediately topped on the kiosk by his 23-year-old grandmother, the Marchioness of Londonderry, who said his letter was "vulgar, silly and childish."

Plane Disaster

The main part of the airliner which crashed August 11 killing 79 persons was believed reached its swampy crash site near Inverness, Que. last week-end, but workers had found no large section of the mangled fuselage.

Jean Paul Fourrier of the transport department said the inquiry into Canada's biggest air disaster will take "several months" but he is confident the cause of the crash will be determined.

None of the bodies of the 73 passengers returning from a holiday in Britain on the air crew members, had been found intact. Two of the plane's four engines were pulled from their swampy bog bed about 15 feet down. Both were damaged.

Wheat Surplus

Canada entered the new crop year August 1 with the largest wheat surplus in history, clogging markets and farms and threatening to swell into one of the biggest political issues in years.

Halon CCF Riding Protests Land Sale For Hospital Site

At an executive meeting of the Halton CCF Riding Association held last Thursday evening, it was unanimously agreed to send a letter to James M. Allan, Minister of the Department of Highways, requesting that the Department reconsider their proposal to sell the 11.2 acres of land which includes the Brant Museum and the only remaining park area in Burlington for the construction of a hospital.

The letter contained many reasons why the Department should be well advised to hold up the sale of the land and many reasons why that particular piece of land would not be an appropriate place to build the proposed hospital.
