Football Notes

By Wayne Ridley, Dale Woodburn
Acton High School football squad played hot to Georgetown Raiders on Monday and like good hosts sent the visitors home a happy lot with a 10-6 win.

Our local heroes, hampered by the absence of "Dad" Dawkins and Ross Shortill (waylaid by the flu bug) continued to keep possession of the pigskin in the first quarter, but old lady luck was not with them and they couldn't seem to squeeze over the goal line.

Persistence paid off when, with courageous yardage gained by Frank Cooper and Emerson "Beaver" Baker, the local boys scored the first touchdown of the game. They failed to make the convert but were heroes among the cheer leaders and sideliners.

The balance of the second quarter was scoreless as the Acton boys stopped the Raiders in their attempts to gain back the lead points.

In the third quarter, the Raiders' halfback pulled a sneak run around the end and tallied to even up the score. Their attempt at converting went astray and a tie score remained at the end of the quarter.

The Raiders pressed hard in the fourth quarter and managed to pull

Members of the grade 9C team are: Morris McElvey captain, Ina Force, Anne Van de Poel, Sharlene Marshall, Betty McArthur, Cheryl Murray, Ann McLean and Elsa Mack.

Although both teams tried very hard, 9C just couldn't quite succeed in beating the Red Devils probably because they have not had as much practice together. Good going team Grade 12 is proud of you and 9C, better luck next time.

Western leaders will gather in Paris in December for a meeting of the NATO council in a move to make the 15-nation meeting a "summit" conference of the west in alliance.

The French Foreign Ministry was formally notified last Saturday that President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Macmillan intend to go to Paris. Prime Minister Dieffenbach at Ottawa announced he would lead Canada's delegation. Diplomatic informants in Bonn said Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany could be expected to make the trip.

The British and American leaders at their Washington talks last week began making plans for a revolutionary revision of the allied defence systems in which NATO plays a leading part. A drive to speed up military modernization of NATO forces was indicated in the reports of growing war strength in Russia.

The visit to Paris will be the first voyage of a United States president since Harry Truman went to Potsdam in 1945.

Show Solidarity

Prime purpose of the meeting is to add an authoritative quality to the Western alliance. It was also felt that many new decisions must be taken quickly because of Soviet advances in scientific, military and economic air fields, notably the Russian earth satellite and her reported intercontinental ballistic missile.

The communiqué following the December meeting at Macmillan talked at Washington and the December meeting of Atlantic alliance ministers will have "special character."

With Russia's Sputnik orbiting the earth with Soviet H bombs and long range rockets undergoing tests, and with Red experts roaming the Middle East, Eisenhower and Macmillan agreed the old policies no longer were good enough. The broad answer they came up with was to draw together the whole free world into a protective shield of free world atomic rocket might.

American and British officials have been working for many months on machinery for a new approach. Some of it undoubtedly will be unveiled at the Paris meeting. Specific ideas already have developed. Washington reports say. A major one is the supplying of American bases in friendly countries around the world with the most modern of defensive weapons such as the 100-mile intermediate range ballistic missile (IRBM).

But Washington officials want to proceed carefully. It is reported they have no intention, for example, of indiscriminately arming every free world nation with these weapons. Control would be left in Washington.

Prime Minister Dieffenbach's announcement of his intention to visit Paris was made in a statement just before he opened talks at Ottawa with Prime Minister Macmillan last Saturday. It was disclosed he had made his decision however, even before Mr. Macmillan and Mr. Eisenhower presented a NATO summit meeting.

M. Dieffenbach likely will be accompanied by External Affairs Minister Smith, Defence Minister Parker and Finance Minister Fleming as well as senior governmental advisers.

Sputnik Waning?

There were now reports last week end that the radio signals from the Russian earth satellite were weakening as the baby moon continued streaking around the earth at 16,000 miles an hour. It was launched on October 4.

In Lyndon scientists who have been tracking the satellite on its test regular orbit said they could hear neither a beeper nor a whistle. But the naval research laboratory in Washington reported five U.S. stations had picked up some signals weak and intermittent.

A scientist at the radio observatory at Cambridge, England, said the satellite launched at a height of 360 miles appeared to be dropping by about two miles a day at the high point of its orbit.

Meanwhile Dr. Fred Singer, an American physicist who deals in space research, said the U.S. Air Force's Project Big Bear project eventually lead to a rocket which will circle the moon and return to earth. But the White House denied a published report that President Eisenhower had ordered construction of the first U.S. nuclear rocket.

Most French workers returned to their jobs last Saturday after a 24-hour strike slowed France almost to a standstill and cost industries millions of dollars. Transport was crippled, factories closed and striking workers milled in the streets during the walkout, a massive protest against the rising cost of living in France.

The workers had apparently expected no direct results. The most they could hope for was increased public sympathy for their plight, since there was no government to do anything about the general economic problem.

Some observers said the frustration evidenced by the walkout might help Socialist Guy Mollet become premier, to end the mounting political crisis. He hoped to win National Assembly approval of a new cabinet this week.

Death in Barber Shop

Police at New York called in a stream of underworld characters in search for clues to the killing of a 25-year-old former boxer, Albert Anastasia, rubbed out by two gunmen in a plush barber shop of a mid-Manhattan hotel.

The old and former boxer, known as the "old Murder," Inc. syndicate who was assertedly responsible for the murder of dozens of victims himself, was riddled with five bullets by two masked gunmen as he sat in a barber chair. The assassins apparently escaped in crowds in the subway station, according to the two gunmen that were in the direction of Guelph. Desmond Collen had noticed the fire and called the Rockwood firemen.

Fifteen men of the fire department answered the alarm with their chief, Herb Bolton, at about a quarter to ten. They were able to save a small building nearby. The beautiful old stone house was not close enough to the barn to be in any danger.

Besides the barn and animals, many bales of straw were destroyed. Insurance coverage was low and the loss of the barn is a real blow to Mr. Benham, who lost a larger barn by fire a year ago. Cause of the fire is unknown.
