Tents in Snow Seek Camp Site

Boy Scouts in a search for a camp site for the summer, met with weather the likes of which they'll never see come July. They spent the chilly holiday weekend touting in the north with leaders.
First night out: temperature down to 20 degrees and snow covering the ground.
Second night out: temperature down to 15 degrees.
During the day, one blizzard. Result? They still haven't decided on a camp site!
However, the merits of different locations are being debated hotly by the scouts with a lot more information at their disposal.
Making the trip, in cars driven by Scout Master Harley Coles and Harry Otterbein, were patrol leaders Glen Barr, Bob Hinton, Ricky Currie and Brian Otterbein; second and Max Haggart, Paul McGeachin and Andrew Smith.
Friday night they spent at High Falls Provincial Park near Bracebridge. When they awoke, they found the ground outside their tents blanketed with snow.
They drove through Algonquin park in a blinding blizzard, but stopped to see the nature museum and ask questions about camp sites. This was also where Ricky Currie's shoe had to be retrieved from the middle of a river, but to give all the details would be impossible.
Saturday night they set up camp at Orville on Maple Lake near Parry Sound.
Sunday they took the water taxi to Beauclerk Island, where Acton scouts have camped before. They hiked across the island inspecting sites.

Frying Hint

This week's hint: Frying Tomatoes.
Dip the slices in vinegar first. This keeps them whole when cooking.
