Neuritis is an inflammatory condition affecting nerves. When neuritis affects the neck, shoulder and arm region, it is called Brachial Neuritis. The symptoms of Brachial Neuritis depend mainly on the type of nerve affected. Pain is the most predominant symptom. The pain may be mild or a burning gnawing, numbing sensation.

In most cases, the cause of Brachial Neuritis is due to pressure from misplaced vertebrae on nerves in the neck. For this reason, Chiropractic has had much success with Brachial Neuritis. In fact, it has been shown by the International Chiropractic Research Foundation that for all types of neuritis, Chiropractic care resulted in 92% becoming completely well or greatly improved.

Published in the interest of the public to explain and illustrate the nerves in the neck. For this reason, Author's office is located in Acton.

Here's one for the road

The dude was ready to take his first horseback ride. "What kind of a saddle do you want, sir?" asked the ranch hand. "One with, or without, a horn?"

The big city dweller looked around before replying, "Without a horn, I guess. There doesn't seem to be much traffic around here."

We've got horns, too. And built around them some of the finest used cars you've seen — on one lot, at the same time. Cars that are frisky as a colt and dependable as old Dobbin. So for a real "ride" come on down. Don't miss
