Algonquin Museum Tells Park History

The museum in Algonquin Park is open to the public daily until Thanksgiving Day, the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests announced.

In store for visitors are displays of various species of fish, reptiles, amphibians, birds and mammals native to Algonquin Provincial Park. In addition the entire display section is devoted to the history of human occupation in Algonquin Park.

Groups desiring talks or conducted tours are advised to contact E. Taylor, park naturalist, Algonquin Park P.O., Ontario. The summer program of illustrated talks and scheduled hikes began on July 1 and continues until Labour Day.

Canada's native peoples, the Eskimos and Indians, are believed to have come to this continent in prehistoric times from northern Asia.

The cooperation of parents and teachers, "If you feel the effort is worthwhile, encourage your boys and girls to enter the contest," urged the county weed inspector.
