As with farm crops, the period of tree growth varies greatly.

In 1795, the British government ordered a regular izzue of lime juice to sailors in an attempt to curb scurvy. Dure ing the days of sailing ships, when a vessel might not touch port for months, the disease was common among sailors. It was not until the discovery of vitamins in the 20th century, however, that it was learned that scurvy, results from the tack of Vitamin C, in which citrus fruits abound.
