

NOW IS ONE TIME of year when husbands would like to switch places with the other party to the marriage agreement. With roles reversed the male half would be able to sit at home, switch on the idiot box and take a long look at the annual phenmonon known as the world series while the wife did the chores over at the shop.

Unfortunately, few wives will agree to swap places. Some plead pressure of social engagements. Others decline, pointing to Junfor with remarks meant to insinuate that he' would get little attention if the old man was at home. The majority just give an idiotic little giggle.

However, we've got a big fat sneaky opinion that the little woman harbors a half-hidden desire to see the excitement the series always stirs up. They like to watch the muscular Mantles, Nelsons, Groats and other specimens of diamond duellists flex their biceps. In their sub-conscious they compare them to the wizened up, balding wretch they married. And then there's the excitement, the glamor and all those razor blade commercials. Silly, you say? Well then, how come the vice-president of those United States publicly declares that it is his considered opinion the other main sports event stateside-the presidential election-won't really open up until the world series is over. Who does my wife pick to take the series? The Yankees, of course. As she explains it, "I don't know any of the Pitts | Came the Rains burgh players."
