

Rule Builders Erect Home Municipal Board Hearing

The minutes of the council meeting of May 2, 1955, at which time Thomas and Thomas were present to discuss the situation, Mr. Tyler suggested it might be an oversight of the clerk at the time. He pointed out that not all conversations at council level appeared in the minutes.

Ed Footitt, on council in 1955, also recalled the agreement with the builders if they decided the land to the town.

When Mr. Thomas Sr. and each of his sons took the stand to testify, they each in turn admitted there was no written guarantee from the town regarding the building permit. They stated they did not recall the agreement and considered a gentleman's agreement sufficient and took the word of council at the time.

Chairman Queries

Interrupting the examination of Jack Thomas, chairman Greenwood asked the owner how long this had been in the building business. After learning Acton was the company's first big project, although a number of individual houses had been built previously, the chairman remarked, "It amazes me you didn't encounter zoning by-laws before building in Acton and therefore would have secured definite assurance from council instead of an oral agreement regarding the building permit."

Asked by Mr. McGeachie who signed the deed permitting the conveyance of sufficient property from the builder to the town for road access, Mr. Thomas stated C. E. Leatherland had drawn up the deed and they had accepted it.

Eric Niczerzi, home owner adjacent to lot 38, was present to object to granting the building permit. He told the board he had been approached on two occasions by the builders to purchase the vacant lot. Mr. Niczerzi said he had offered the lot for $300 and the second time $600, but refused to buy at the prices offered.

Resident Objects

Asked by counsel for the applicants his reason for objecting to the granting of the permit, Mr. Niczerzi pointed out that a portion of his view would be cut off and it was possible the proposed building would come within ten feet of his driveway.

When it was suggested by Mr. Russell that Mr. Niczerzi might be pleased not to see the permit granted because he could then purchase it and build a garage, Mr. Niczerzi remarked, "I don't want the lot. I have other plans."

J. McGeachie called to the witness stand by town solicitor Aldo Braida, was questioned regarding the May 2, 1955 council meeting. He inquired of Mr. McGeachie if the minutes were correct as reported and if Thomas and Thomas had been accompanied to this meeting by their solicitor as noted in the minutes. Clerk administrator McGeachie told the board this was correct.

Asked if the builders had raised any objections during the last public hearing when the zoning by-law changes were aired, Mr. McGeachie said they had not.

Prior to the decision handed down by the board members, both solicitors summed up the cases for their clients. During this time Eugene Braida, former owner of the land purchased by the builders for the subdivision, suggested the building permit for lot 38 be granted.

During the chairman's summary following the final decision, Mayor J. Goy pointed out through the town's solicitor that their order would take precedence over amending by-laws now present before the board in Toronto.

Disclaiming knowledge of the amendments to the by-law, Mr. Greenwood granted the mayor an opportunity to explain. Mr. Goy pointed out that council were attempting to control the manner in which future homes would be placed on vacant lots in order to prevent the garage problems that exist today.

Mr. Goy informed board members he was still puzzled how future councils would deal with the garage problem.

Georgetown Mayor Urges Better Town Planning Claims Provincial Government Turning its Back

"The Provincial government is turning its back on planning, but asking the smaller municipalities to do it for them," charged Georgetown Mayor Tom Hyde as councillors from Milton, Acton and Georgetown met last week at the North Halton Urban Board's inaugural meeting.

Besides naming Acton councillor Les Duly as 1961 chairman and Milton clerk E. J. Costigan as secretary-treasurer, the Urban Board members held lengthy discussions on planning, zoning and urban services, high school boards and education, occupational lists on census rolls, and retarded children's maintenance grants.

"Mess of a Mess"

In berating Provincial officials for high-falootance toward planning and the dangers of continued expansion by everybody, everywhere, Mayor Hyde called Toronto a "mess of a mess of humanity" and urged some strict control. He predicted Toronto will gobble up Milton, then Brampton and Bramalea will gobble up each other, and Toronto will eventually gobble up both of them. Acton, Georgetown and Milton could edge out past their boundaries, and eventually end up in the same mess too, he added.

Acton councillor Bert Hinton urged the board to have local planning board petition the Department of Planning and Development to conduct a study of regional planning in Halton County. No action was taken, but delegates to the meeting promised to think it over.

Elected . . . Appointed?

A discussion followed on whether or not high school board trustees should be appointed by councils, as is presently the case, or elected by the public in the annual elections, as has been suggested by another Ontario county.

A motion favoring the present system was dropped when councillors left they were not ready for a decision on the matter. Acton representatives favored an election system, but Milton spokesmen urged continuation of the appointment system. A general discussion on education, including costs, controls, salaries, standards and government support followed but no concrete action was taken.

Georgetown councillor Jim Emerson wondered why census takers couldn't list the proper occupation of ratepayers on the tax rolls, thus providing an excellent list of the potential labor pool in a town. He said present classifications such as "machinist" or "laborer" should be detailed enough to give a prospective employer a good idea of what labor force is available in each town. The local industrial commissions were asked to study the matter.

A request to Georgetown from the North Halton Retarded Children's Association for funds for maintenance of the Sunshine School, was passed on to the Urban Board for discussion. Councillors agreed each town should share the costs by granting an amount equivalent to that spent on a normal child's education in each town.

Accomplished a Great Deal in 1960 Rector's Warden Tells Vestry Meeting

The annual budget was approved, reports heard and new officers appointed and elected at the vestry meeting of the church of St. Alban the Martyr Monday evening in the Parish Hall. The rector, the Rev. H. B. Stokroff, who had given his year's report at church the previous day, presided and about 40 attended.

Rector's warden Harold Denny gave the joint report for himself and the people's warden Sam Snow. The program for 1960 laid down in the sector plan was substantial and "you have accomplished a great deal this year," he said. He recalled the new furnace, rectory garage and fencing, rectory sidewalk, church and rectory painting, new church windows and the remodeling and redecorating of the church office.

He referred to Vic Bristow taking over the duties of sexton during the year, first use of the revised prayer book in June, increase in attendance despite the fact some active families had moved away, the participation in sector plan for the second time and the formation of the servers' guild. Paying tribute to the rector, he said, "I feel and I am sure that you must, that the tremendous spiritual growth of our parish can only be attributed to the ceaseless drive of our rector."

Pass Budget

Kenneth Knox gave the treasurer's statement and the proposed budget, the highest ever, was passed.

License Sales Slow Issuer Expects Rush

Local issuer for the license plates and operators' permits lack Harrap, reported this week that to date only 10 per cent of last year's sales have been reached.

According to previous publications expire date for 1960 license plates is March 15 and car owners are asked to shop early and avoid the rush.

Mr. Harrap reminds owners to bring along the insurance liability certificate when renewing their plates in order to save an extra $5.00 fee.

The local issuer stated he expected a last minute rush and urged everyone to procure their new licenses as early as possible in order to avoid lining up at the last minute.

196 Use Envelopes

The envelope secretary's report given by Mrs. Snow on behalf of Mr. Clifford showed there had been 196 members using envelopes during 1960 with an increase in giving.

Elected to the advisory council were C. E. Leatherland, J. Rol and H. Denny. Appointed by the rector were G. Haggitt, J. Graham and K. Blow.

The rector closed the meeting with prayer and refreshments were served by the ladies.

Sunday morning the rector had given his report in church when he said 1960 saw 45 persons confirmed and two received. "This number constitutes a record for this parish. There were 36 baptisms of whom eight were adults. There was one minute's silence for 10 who had died during the year."

"We are the church and we must show that we live in and for Jesus Christ," he said. "We must show that we have committed our spirit into His hands and thank God today and always that we have so many true Christian men and women in our congregation. Knowing this we can look ahead with much confidence, trusting in God even greater things will happen in this church in 1961."
