Flags Were Gay But People Aways

The holiday weekend was quiet. The big gay flags along the highways in town lined the short route of many, many cars on their way someplace or other as they passed through. Many Actonians edged in on the stream of traffic and headed away, too.

Stores were shut three days in a row - Saturday, to celebrate Dominion Day, Sunday, and their usual closing day, Monday. Some plants were closed Friday; most on Monday.

Many left town for the entire summer; some for two weeks and more just for a weekend's camping trip or visit.

Tuesday, activity picked up. People were back at work. The Monday garbage was picked up. The flags came down.
