Mrs. Ford Flies North Sunday Transferred 1300 Miles Away

Chief telephone operator here for seven years, Mrs. Margaret Ford learned just this week that she is being transferred to Ogdensburg, 1300 miles away. She flies Sunday—her first flight—and starts work in a fully equipped trailer next Monday morning. An emergency situation necessitated a quick decision and Mrs. Ford is packing and settling affairs here in record time.

"Mrs. Bell" as she is called by many friends, is anxious to like her new surroundings although she is receiving some kidding about life in the north. She says she has been transferred in any case when dial phones come into use here next winter.

Happy Here
"I like everyone here so much," she said, "and I'd like to thank all my friends here for making my stay so pleasant. I appreciate it from the bottom of my heart."

Where she'll be living next week is somewhat of a mystery. Ogdensburg is reached by train from Fort William, its population is just 500. The nearest town is Dividen, seven miles away, with 5000 people. She doesn't know how she'll get her car up.

Six trained operators are being sent from Hamilton and there'll be a staff of nine there to start with. There will be a toll office in Dividen when dial phones go into use, and the operators will move out of their trailer. There will be a large area to cover.

Call Deaf School Tender Start Work in September

Construction of the Province's new $9,000,000 school for the deaf in Milton was expected to begin in September. Public Works Minister Ray Connell announced today (Thursday) as he called for tenders for the construction of the first stage of the school.

The first stage includes the junior school, staff residence, hospital, administration, laundry and boiler plant buildings. When completed the school will accommodate 450 southern Ontario deaf students.

The junior school, to accommodate 200, will be a one-storey brick structure. All other buildings in the first stage will be singlestorey except the two-storey staff residence.

Students will be divided into units for 30 children to permit constant supervision and minimize institutional atmosphere. The units will be separated by landscaped courtyards and linked by covered walks. Each dormitory will have indoor and outdoor play areas.

Subsequently, a high school with accommodation for 200 — and a kindergarten — with accommodation for 50 — will be built.

Classrooms of about 10 children will permit highly individual instruction.

Whether the tender is to be let in the first stage will be decided by the province in August. The province is in a hurry to get the school started in order that children might be placed in the school in September.

New Dial Exchange Building on Schedule

The structural work on your new Dial Exchange building is now complete. Inside finishing is in progress. Land-aping has been arranged for and will be completed by the fall.

Located at Church and Elm streets, the new building will contain the latest in electronic dialing switching equipment. The building is of new design — a first for the company and is expected to be completed two months faster than most conventional exchange buildings.

Once considered a luxury item, the telephone has become such an integral part of daily living that you can scarcely go anywhere nowadays without finding the familiar phone virtually within arm's reach. Apart from the more obvious places, such as offices, stores, street corners, public waiting rooms and, of course, the modern home with one or more extension telephones in convenient locations, there are some locations for telephones that might surprise you. Phones for automobiles, for instance, have been available for some time. Business men find them useful for keeping in constant touch with their home offices or customers. A great number of commercial vehicles also have telephones for similar reasons. Recently, an experiment in dialing calls from an aircraft was conducted in British Columbia. Eventually telephones may be used on Canadian airliners in much the same way they are now being used in some parts of the U.S.A. In Japan, they have been experimenting with telephones on trains. This has proved so popular that they now plan to expand this service. But the latest word on telephone service for travellers concerns telephones on buses. A bus company in the U.S. offers this service to its customers. If present plans are realized we may see the same thing in Canada.

Going on vacation? Remember the telephone can help make your trip a real success. By phoning ahead you can be assured of adequate accommodation at the end of a long day's drive. And don't forget to call the folks at your destination to let them know when you'll be arriving, especially if you've been delayed. It will add to their peace of mind and save you the necessity of rushing to make up time. And at the end of the trip, what about a reassuring call back home to let them know you've arrived safely? Enjoy worry-free travel this summer. As the saying goes, "Whenever you go, go first by telephone." Have a happy vacation.
