Miss M. Sommerville Auxiliary Hostess

The annual meeting of the Afternoon Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society of Knox Church was held on Thursday afternoon, November 9, at the home of Miss Minnie Sommerville and Mrs. Pearl Kennedy, Brock Avenue.

In keeping with the occasion, Mrs. Moran called the group to order with the reading of a verse for Remembrance Day, by Rudyard Kipling, and with prayer. At the request of Mrs. R. R. Parker, convener of the program committee, the study of British Guiana was continued by Miss Daisy Folster. She told of the coming of the seven nationalities which comprise the colony, their industrial pursuits, the establishment of churches and the forward march of Christianity. The work among the East Indians was begun in 1885 by the first Presbyterian missionary there, Rev. John Gibson, followed later by Rev. J. B. Cooper, descendants of whom are still residents in the colony.

Very gratifying reports, financially and in other respects, were read by the conveners of all committees.

As usual, a dainty lunch added to the interest of the meeting.

Midnight Oil Honor Graduate Receives Plaque

Volunteer workers are burning the midnight oil at the arena as they repair and paint seats and boards, pour cement and string electrical wiring.

The response to a call from Mayor John Goy for volunteers to help with work in order to eliminate some expense was excellent and workers, armed with hammers and saws, welding paint brushes and taping boards, are busy making repairs at the arena to be ready when the artificial ice plant is put into operation.

Kenneth Rotz, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rotz, R.R. 2, Acton was honored by the Department of Education and Labor recently with a plaque for general proficiency during a 10-week course in motor mechanics at the Provincial Institute of Trade, Toronto.

Chosen as top student in his class, Kenneth graduated with honors and is completing his apprenticeship at a garage in Bolton.
