Spring Dust-Up

While it may have resulted in sore backs and strained muscles the grand spring weather we have enjoyed for the last two weekends has been a great boon to the annual spring clean-up. Rakes and paint brushes have blossomed forth to take away. the results of the spring thaw. Elsewhere throughout the province various fowns have endorsed beautification programs which last anywhere from a week to a month. Main objective, of course, is to wheedle the citizens into a spring clean-up. The main device used to accomplish this seems to be a high pressure publicity campaign to get people doing what they're going to do anyway.

Instead of issuing proclamations and forming more unnecessary committees the council here has shown the way, and started the annual spring clean-up without a great fantere of publicity. Street patching has started on the surfaced roadways in town.

The new street sweeper has arrived and gone to work like a tornado. Apparently the watering system on the sweeper doesn't work too well - in fact, hardly at all - and the approach of the sweeper has been likened to a Texas duststorm. However, after the rain on Tuesday, the dust created was considerably less and with the repair of the watering system the machine should do a good job.

Tuesday the stump removal program began when the tree experts moved in with equipment that chews the stumps into sawdust." After years of growing and providing shade the trees were cut down for one reason or another and again for years the stumps remained stumbling blocks to pro-

The tree planting program announced a few weeks ago has not received the public acceptance it should have. Under the plan the town will supply six-foot to eight-foot trees. The cost is $5 and $2.50 is absorbed by the town while the property owner pays the other $2.50. After listening to the talk that occurs when a tree in town is cut down we expected there would be no problem in finding places for 80 new trees. The program has been expanded and is now available on more streets.

The clean-up at the sewage plant continues and while this can hardly be classified as beautification, the fact remains that it is a clean-up. The brush and foliage removal at the bridges on Brock, Church and Main Streets will improve the appearance. A rebuilding and paving project on Main St. North, will improve the western entrance to Acton. An expanded sidewalk repair program is something we've all looked forward to for some time.

However this is the town's contribution to beautification. Your contribution is going to remain those tired backs, aching muscles and run-down feeling you end up with as you continue your "beautification."

Warning—Protection Ahead . . .

There is one well-known traffic signal that is never likely to be described in official driving manuals. That is the flicking of headlights that many drivers use to advise others that there is a police radar speed check point shead.

Helpfulness towards other road users is a very desirable attitude in drivers, the Ontario Safety League stresses. And enlightened police authorities make no effort to suppress this camaraderie that has saved many a speeding driver from a ticket.

But is there anything really commendable in shielding other drivers from deserved penalties for breaking the law? Or is it good fellowship to band together to out-smart the police, in their work of trying to reduce the kind of driving that adds unnecessary danger to our streets and highways?

Is it a matter for praise, or self satisfaction, to encourage disrespect for the law, and the men who administer it? . . . to help . other drivers evade the correction they merit, and knowingly risk? . . . to protect the operating permits of men who consistently abuse the privilege-one of whom, next week, may use his car to mutilate or kill? We make traffic laws for our own protection. We appoint police officers to enforce those laws, to make the protection effective '-and in Ontario there are thousands of police (though still, not enough) doing a fine job of intelligent enforcement, to the benefit of the great majority.

Our roads would be safer and pleasanter places to travel if more people believed in co-operating with authority, instead of dodging it. The mature driver realizes that we are fortunate to have police officers, cruisers and radar sets ahead.

M.P.P. Stan Hall Lashes Out At Opposition in Government

Hahon M.P.P. Stanley L. Hall, who has represented the County in the Provincial parliament for 18 years, took a long swing at the Liberal opposition's "political ship of state that has floundered on the rocks of frustration" in a recent speech in the House on the budget. Explaining you've got to spend money to serve the rapid population boom with highways. schools, hospitals and public huildings, he claimed the opposittion's charge that Conservative government was thrusting the country farther into debt was "far from the truth." The hadget, he said, "was more than a balanced budget when you consider the assets that have been created by this government." He listed the schools, hospitals, homes for the aged and other assets whose values cannot be counted in dollars and cents, then swung back in history to the laying of the C.P.R., the Ontario Northland Railway, the Ontario Hydro (all established under a Conservative goverment) and other accomplishments.

New members to the opposition had his sympathy, the M

P.P. said. "It is a shame to see such bright, intelligent young men joining the crew of a Political Ship of State that has flound- ity to picture your cards along ered on the rocks of frustration -there is no hope left-the crew has joined the Order of Doom, Gloom and Despair.

"The port holes of this ship are so barnacle infested that the crew can see no distance into the future, even the Hon. member for York Centre, the self-appointed King Fish and his Mystic Knights of the Sea are providing little assistance to their captain.

Turning to the New Democrats, he recalled how they once referred to the Conservatives as nothing but the dregs. "I would say those dregs were very potent, for that political party in the last 48 years has given the Province of Ontario the best government it has enjoyed since Confederation. It is much different with this political party that has recently changed its name. BY BILL SMILEY

Two more milestones of 1962, Easter and Opening Day, have whipped past, and I managed to come through if not with flying colors, at least without disgracing myself.

Easter was a regular fundan go around our place this year. With an organist, an altar boy, and a girl chorister in the family, and about six church services on the weekend, the dog, the cat, the kittens and myself had to walk warlly, as the bodies hurtled by at the speed of those in an old silent movie.

Climax of the weekend arrived on Easter Monday, when Kim Smiley made her television debut, with a recorder group. I drove a carload of the kids to the studios, my cars ringing with last-minute instructions from the boss, about combing the child's hair, making sure her slip wasn't showing, and about 14 other

I did my best. But I'd like to see some of you fathers trying to comb a kid's hair when she's wild with excitement about appearing on TV in a few minutes. It's like trying to lasso a humming-bird with a lawn hose. And sure enough, her slip was showing; plonty of it.

During the Easter holidays, les girls went off to visit Granny, while Hugh and I stayed home to work. Something was proved which we had both suspected. Females are directly responsible for 97 per cent of the noise and confusion in the average household. It was as peaceful as a tomb while they were away. And just about as interesting.

Then along came Opening Day of the trout season, the annual shedding of winter's cerements. Usually, it's an exhausting ordeal. You stay up until two in the morning, the night before, making plans for next day, over a noggin, with a couple of wild-eyed friends. Two

The play is easy. Three tricks are lost in the black suits and with the heart finesse working. 10 tricks are assured in the red

When you play bridge, always with your partner's cards. This way, you can better evaluate the potential of your hand.

Bridge Tip: Even though you hold only 13 cards, you must build up a picture of the partnership holding. Never underestimate the power of distribution So long for this week and while you play bridge, always be considerate of your partner, for "Bridge is a partnership game".

FRUIT COCKTAIL

Fruit cocktail, one of today's most popluar canned products, is a mixture of diced peaches and pears, segmented pineapple, halved maraschino cherries and whole seedless grapes - in definite proportions. Its forerunners were the 18th century melange of the French-fresh fruits in season preserved in brandy and sugar for the fruitless winter months - and the Italian tuttifrutti, similar to the melange except for the substitution of rum for brandy.

hours later, you groan out ofbed, totter into the cold blackness, and spend the next 14 hours Jurching through swamps, frozen, frustrated and wishing you were 18 again.

This year, I tried a new technique, and it was the best Opening Day I've ever experienced. I passed up the night-before session. When the alarm went off, at 4 a.m., I shut it off, chuckled flendishly, and went back to sleep. I rose at 10, had a leisurely breakfast, and arrived at the trout stroam about the time the others were going home. Three hours later, I had had a pleasant outing, had taken as many frout as any other year, and didn't feel like the wreck of the 99.

Now, that those two landmarks in the year have been successfully negotiated, we can turn our thoughts to more trivial things. Like politics, for example. Yes, gentle reader, the mighty stirrings of that big, lazy hibernator called Democracy are being heard in the land. The big-game hunters are sharpening their spears and arrows, and the beaters (that's us voters) are being harangued before we start out to flush the beast into the open.

As nearly as I can make out, from listening carefully to spokesmen of the various parties, the Tories are going to be turned out without mercy, the Liberals are going to be turfed out with a shellacking, the NDP hasn't a hope, and the Socreds' claims are in the realm of dreamland.

If this is true, why have an election that will cost voter 22 cool millions? just go bumbling and stumbling along? Everybody says the Yanks will own the place in a few years, anyway, have a suggestion which would save us all those millions, as well as a lot of potential carache. It's simplicity itself. Every four years, let each party nominate its choice for each seat in Parliament. Then we accept them all. This wouldn't cost a penny.

In this way, we'd have about 1,100 candidates, all good men. This is too many. We don't want to have to build an addition to the House of Commons, with all those school additions still to be built. Well, here's what we'd do. We'd have the 1,000 draw lots, for the seats available.

The lucky ticket holders would become MPs. Each would retain his own party membership, so that we'd still have a loyal Opposition. The party with the most luck would form the government. We'd save all that election money, and we wouldn't have all those broken hearts on election

There'd be just as much suspense, under my plan, as there would be with a regular election. And I'll bet you a spolled ballot to an ancient senator that we'd have just as good, or as bad, government

The only improvement I can see to the suggestion would be to combine the event with a national sweepstakes, based on the draw. All profits would be appli ed to the national debt. Who is with me in promoting this sensible policy?
