A Quiet Time . . .

There won't be fireworks, displays and parades, no fireworks displays are planned and there's some confusion about whether to celebrate, but Sunday in Dominion Day and unfortunately it can't be much more than a holiday in those parts.

Dominion Day of 1967 is one of the most significant dates in Canada's history. The typical residents of the Dominion Day us to minimize the excitement of the American Independence Day.

A newspaper of 1967, Dominion Day, noted that the Dominion Day is a special day of rejoicing and a happy Friday in essence it is a day of national pride and national unity. It is a day when we should be proud of our nation and the values it stands for. It is a day when we should be proud of our nation and the values it stands for.

The Financial Crisis . . .

The financial crisis we are facing is a serious one. It is a crisis that has been building up for some time and it is now reaching a point where it is becoming a major problem for the government. We are facing a situation where the government is unable to meet its obligations and where the economy is in a state of stagnation. This is a crisis that we must face and we must find a way to deal with it.

Halton Goes Liberal . . .

Halton has elected a Liberal government in the recent provincial election. This is a significant change for the region and it is expected to have a major impact on the local economy and the lives of the people of Halton. The new government is expected to focus on improving the economy and creating jobs for the people of Halton.

Summer and Spice . . .

BY BILL BERRY

Coming up, dead ahead, is just about the biggest weekend of the year for Canadians. It has an exhilaration that no other weekend on our calendar possesses. Hearts are light and gay because it's the real advent of summer.

According to an old superstition, summer actually begins on June 21. But try to tell that to a school teacher, glass-eyed in a museum of chalk-dust and warm turning-places as she labors through the last week of classes with children whose minds and hearts have fled the classroom to the great green throbbing outdoors.

Try to tell it to the tourist on vacation, whose cabin acts as empty as his cash register, whose boat squats on the huge lake like so many potted crocodiles, whose dining-room echoes only to the low tread of his wife as she lurches from the kitchen to see if there's any point in preparing dinner for non-existent guests.

Now, summer begins on the last weekend in June, and we might as well resign ourselves to it. That's when the torrid of burning-pool lulls in an exultant tidal wave from their schools filled with a burning sensation of freedom which will last about 48 hours.

That's when the factory worker, who has spent 115 months putting round pegs in square holes, or something of the sort, sets off, quivering with life, to his two-weeks-with-pay, ready to hail-kill himself golfing, swimming, drinking beer, dancing or whatever is his pleasure, before crawling back, spent but content to the shrieking monotony of his job.

That's when mother, who has spent the past 10 months crawling out of bed to find clean socks and blouses, to tote about the kitchen making toast with peanut butter and jam, to have a new spring in their step, an unaccustomed smile in their hearts. There's the deep inner warmth that comes from the knowledge that for the next two months they'll get meals when ever they feel like it, and do the washing ditty.

For the bass fisherman, a breed as peculiar in his way as the deer-hunter, this is the big weekend of the year. It means the beginning of two beautiful months in which he can bask to a crisp in an open boat, fish various breeds of water with miscellaneous hardware, and drink to his heart's content. Sheer joy.

For the transient young executive, too, it's a special weekend. Lattes settled in a cottage, he leaves Sunday night with protestations that "I'm going to awfully lonely without you guys." And as he drives down the highway, back to the city, his heart is light as air, and he contemplates, in a joyous, lovey summer evening, will maybe a drink, and do not to a pleasant restaurant before going home to that beautiful.
