WEED CONTROL NEWS

By V. E. McArthur Halton Weed Inspector

WEEDS CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

We are often reminded these days of the importance of having proper attitudes. For example, to be a safe driver on the highway, one must have the right attitude, or to get along well with other people, generally, we must have the necessary attitude. So it may well largely depend on our attitude, or frame of mind, if we are to see anything of beauty in a weed.

To the farmer, a weed is usually a plant out of place, and to the urban dweller, weeds are often a source of discomfort from hay fever etc. Aside from these facts, if we can control our attitude and look for beauty in a weed, we can find it. Here are a few examples of how weeds can be beautiful.

At the O.A.C. in Guelph, you will find a special bed of weeds. They are labelled as to variety, carefully cultivated and cared for. While this is, of course, an exhibit for educational purposes, it is generally admitted by visitors in July that it is attractive looking and compares very favorably to other flower beds as a heavy spot in the college grounds.

Weed Bouquets—Housewives are using the flowers of weeds quite a lot for bouquets for their living room tables. Frequently, I have seen ladies picking eye-daisies and brown-eyed Susans for this purpose. One of the most recent and prettiest arrangements I have noticed is Wild Carrot flowers in a variety of shades of red, blue and green.

This is accomplished by cutting the stalks about six to eight inches long and placing them in a solution of water, colored to the desired shade by adding food coloring. The Queen Anne's Lace, which is naturally white, responds quite quickly to this

WADERS BEWARE! BOATERS TAKE CARE!

In the Fall of the year when weeds have matured, the waders again go forth in quest of a centrepiece or arrangement for the mantel during the Winter months. Many a milk weed, teal, bullrush etc. are gathered, painted, and eventually turn out to be the finished product and something of beauty.
