The Old North-South Buttle Line . . .

The north versus the south takes oneback to the American Civil war days, but to Helton's leaders it seerts a discussion on the voting power of municipalities in the County.

There is marit in the case for more voting power to the southern municipalities, and we're sure most municipal leaders recognize It. The fears of the north can be understoud when they wew the possibility of being snowed under on any north-south division. Similarly, there must be considerable frustration on the part of southern leaders when they realize a measure they propose can be handily defeated by the north, despite the south's payment of 80 per cent of the cost.

The matter of county voting power is not one on which short-sighted thinking should be allowed to held sway. One of the most important underlying factors should be to within the dounty as a strong municipal force that can withstand the increasing pressures from the direction of Toronto and Hamilton.

If these pressures are allowed to confinue, the county will be dissected piece-meat and scettered to positions of less and less municipal authority in a complex of sprawiing metros. Within the county structure there is a strength that can withstand some of these preseures.

Oskville and Burlington are applying for a private bill in the provincial legislature to increase their voting power. At present the municipalities of Acton, Milton, Georgetown, Esquestry and Nessagawaya are lumped together as the north while Oskville and Buringless are considered the south.

The north now has 16 votes, the south eight votes. The private bill sponeored by the south would give the north 16 votes to the south's 17.

Northern representatives hasten to point out however, that considerable growth in the south could soon overwhelm the north. The case for the south can, however, be seen after a brief diance at some fairly current Metary. In 1957 the south had 18 vores

Since Churchill delivered that famous the Soviet Union and threatened its security. the Soviet Union would not recognize such a decision and would uphold its rights, rely-

It is a vital question, and parhaps it is made less of a mystery by a book by Alexander Dallin, The Soviet Union at the United Nations. As evidence he quotes a welcoming speech made by Premier Khrushchev to Ghane's President Nkrumah: "Even if all the countries of the world adopted a decision which did not accord with the interests of

AROUND

GEORGETOWN - The garbage dump, according to a picturefeature in one of the town's newspapers, has "scenos reminiscent of Dante's Inferno or the smoldering ruins after a nuclear blast". A fire began eating its way around the fringes of the dump, gradually creeping inward beneath the fill.

OAKVILLE - The PUC is going to tighten restrictions on delinquent hydro and water customers who don't pay up on time. But they tried disconnecting the service of one man, who indignantly took his family to the police station and demanded accommodation there. The commission decided to disconnect on accounts 15 days after the discount date.

BRAMPTON-A Supreme Court Grand Jury has condemned the 96-year-old Peel County Jail; terming it overcrowded, substandard and unsatisfactory. The jury said that before a new jail is built, the former jail governor's residence could be used for women prisoners to give the male inmates more space.

BURLINGTON-A proposed new band hall and attached band shell - a needed new "home" for Burlington's bands - will cost an estimated $60,000 the recreation and parks committee was told. The proposed centre could also be used for theatrical presentations.

WATERDOWN-It was "Stan Hill Night" recently when East Flamboro Township officials and friends gathered to honor retiring . clerk-treasurer Stanley H. Hill. He served three years as deputy-reeve, then the past 17 years as clerk treasurer.

MILTON-The hospital is "bursting at the seams" under a rash of illnesses that has filled all available beds, plus a few in the hallways. The hospital has been operating at 97 per cent_capacity but last week every bed was occupied and there was a waiting-list of patients seeking admission for less serious treatment.

Look, I take it all back. I didn't mean a word of it. I'm sorry. I apologise. I'll never say it againas long as I live. Truly, I mean that part about loving snow.

All I can deduce is that either Somebody Up There has no sense of humor, or that the Lord is be my side. I'm not quite sure which. But it will be a long time before I try metting flippent about the weather again.

The other is outside somewhere wielding a snow shovel, and we'll be lucky if we ever see him again. The Old Battleaxe has those midwinter blues. and the dog and cat have to be Hierally kicked out of doors.

The only cheering note we have our sister-in-law, who is wintering in balmy old, tonaty old sweaty old Pierto Rico, in the Caribbean, stating that she had just recovered from the worst cold she had ever had in her life.

To top it all, the inspector is coming to the school this week. This event causes roughly the same panic among school teach ers as an announcement that Princess Margaret Would be around for tes on Friday would cause among a gaggle of house WIVES.

It reminds me of the slarm and despondency that used to take over at any camp during the war, when it was learned that a senior officer would be making an inspection of the camp. Everybody knew perfectly well that the old trout would merely totter around the camp, inspect a guard of honor, and head for the officers' mess to maintain that purplish-complexion he had taken many years to acquire.

But there was always the chance that he'd be one of those maniacs who actually wanted to taste the slop about to be served to the other ranks,

Let's Play Bridge By Bill Coats

Before I give a solution to last week's double dummy problem, I would like to say a few words about the value of cards. The average player thinks of cards only as winners or losers. The better players know that cards often have more value than just being a winner. High cards can be entries from one hand to another. They can also be stoppers to keep the opponents from running their suit. Both high and low cards can be used to squeeze the opponents out of their winners. Low cards can be useful for placing the lead in end play situations.

What value has the ace of spades—in the double dummy problem - South to make 6 spades against the lead of the king of hearts by west.

First, ruff the opening lead in dummy with the spade ten. Now lead the ace of clubs, followed by the king of clubs. On the king of clubs throw the jack of hearts. Next lead a third club and ruff with the ace of spades. Note the value of this card. It is more important as a safe card to ruff with, than it is to take out trump. Now easer dummy with a trump. Lead another club and throw your last-heart. Keep leading clubs till West ruffs. Win and return in South's hand, take met the last trumps and run the rest of the clubs. This way you will ose only one trump trick to West. You can improve your play by. treating all problems that you see in any paper as double dummy problems. Don't read the solutions until you have tried to make the hand. Next week I'll-return to showing hands that occur at the Acton Bridge Club. If you would like to try duplicate bridge, come to the club any Monday at 8.00 p.m. It meets at 35 Raseford Terraca, Warit offender of this sort I've ever experienced was Winston Churchill. One time in France. we were warned that a Very Important Person Would visit our wing, which was flying dive androcket fighter-bombers from a field in Normandy. We sneered. Pigured it would be some crummy Air Commodore who would try to convince us that our young julcy. fresh lives were fair exchange for some vague crap labeled "freedom" or "democracy" or "home-and-the-loved-ones."

Nonetheless, we spitted and polished, And cursed. On big day, we were drawn up in a hollow square, on the field. Pliots' silk scarves, were changed for shirts and ties, flying boots for polished shoes, bare heads for caps at the right angle, beards for clean-shaven faces. Officers in front, other ranks in the rear, where they jolly well should be, in a democracy.

A little plane hopped the nearest hedge and butterflyed into the middle of the square. The motor was cut. A massive figure, rather like an old sealion, struggled out of the rear cockpit, and stood on the wing. We didn't meed jutting cigar to tell us who he was. He grinned. I'll sweet his eyes twinkled, as he looked us

Then he lifted his right arm. as though to make the famous V-sign. Instead, he-made a rude gesture, then beckened. The 'other ranks" safely in the rear where nobody would be offended by their cheap uniforms and low pay, could take a hint. They mave one wild cheer, and fan toward the plane, So help me, several officers in the front rank of the hollow square were trampled so deep into the mud of Normandy that they weren't found for days.

The old man with the great heart, who should have been safely at home in England, not dodge ing about the airfields of France, in a tiny, unarmed aircraft, gave ne five minutes of the famous Churchillian prose. Not the kind you'll find in the history books 'm afraid. More like the kind that Julius Caesar used to give his legions. Roars of delight an-
