High School Models Present Fall Fashion Show Thursday

A fashion show "Index to Fall Plattery" for the modern miss 1963 was presented in the Acton High School auditorium by the home economics girls of grade nine and 10 last Thursday afternoon at 2:15 p.m. 19 charming models from among the home economic girls displayed the costumes supplied by the Dominion Simplicity-Patterns Limited, Toronto.

This is an educational feature provided by the Simplicity Patterns and brought by their stylist, Miss Diane Johnston, to secondary schools in this area.

The stage decorations had the seasonal fall accent of falling leaves, late thums and pumpkins. The mothers and friends of the home economics students who accepted the invitation to come, enjoyed along with about 150 students and teachers, the parade of fall fashion.

After the singing of O Canada, Mr. Hansen opened the show by introducing Miss Johnston. Miss Johnston commented on the materials and the styles as each model in her sprightly manner showed off the interesting features of her garment. The background of organ music and Strauss waltzes lent a classic atmosphere to the performance.

The guests and models were served a cup of tea in the home economics room by some very gracious hostesses from among the home economics students.

19 Models
The models were Diane Ironside, Carol Hammond, Anne Fryer, Jean Findley, June O'Gorman, Jane Cooper, Jean Little, Linda Storey, Vicki Newton, Amy Langley, Trudy Morris, Denise Parker, Susan Winter, Rosv. Gathof, Karen Gervais, Susie Featherstone, Helen Galt, Janet Holsted, and Wilma Van der Polder.

Most fabrics used were cotton, terylene and corduroy with Cor jewelry to enhance the costumes.

Five Chapters
The presentation was divided into five chapters, How to Learn to Sew, How to Figure Fashion, How to Select your Size, How to Key for Color and How to Dazzle your date.

Those who provided the music, Jeanette Milnes and Carolyn Fricker; and those who decorated the stage, Karen Perkins, Anne Fryer, Rita Murray, Marlene Britton, Betty Ramsay, Sandra Fletcher, Diane Swackhamer, Dorothy Thompson and others who helped were indispensable contributors to the success of the program.

Served Refreshments
In the Home Economics room where lunch was served, several of the young girls acquitted themselves most graciously as they served the guests and models light refreshments. Among those were Judy Daby, Sherry Morris, Jessie Ware, Sandra Irwin, Ruthann Leatherland, Judy Gordon, Anne McMillan, Linda Ralston, Grace Graham and Linda Storey.

Ushers who received guests, gave out programs, and seated guests were very busy girls. They were Sandra Stingerland and Margaret O'Rourke.

Others who helped prepare lunch were Susan Robinson, Reia McCrea, Donna West and Mary Lou Perry and others who helped prepare the stage, Jackie Bullough, Carolyn Williamson and Anne McCabe. Others not named contributed too, to a pleasant, profitable and successful fashion show.

Mrs. Orr and the home economic girls are looking forward to a spring fashion show in May, 1964, and hope that more of the mothers and friends of the high school district will come.

First Annual 4-H Awards Night At Erin Masonic Hall Thursday

On Thursday, November 14, the first annual 4-H Awards Night was held in the Erin Masonic Hall.

A toast to the Queen was proposed by John Stubbington and to the 4-H Club by Harry Burt of the Erin Agricultural Society, to which Paul Hamilton made the reply.

An enjoyable supper was served after which the Hon. John Ross M.P.P. made a few remarks on 4-H work.

Hockey to Farming
The guest speaker Louis Fontinato gave a most interesting talk on his hockey career with the New York Rangers and his attempt now to take up farming. Laurel Stubbington thanked Mr. Fontinato.

Henry Stanley, assistant agricultural representative, gave a brief account of accomplishments of members both in the call and swine club during the club year.

Roy Wheeler presented the prize money to Alan Orr and Neil Baldwin of the South Wellington Swine Club who will receive their trophies at the Kawans banquet in Guelph.

Other presentations of prize money and annual gifts by the Ontario Cattle Breeders Association and individual cattle clubs were made to all the members completing their project.

Special awards were made to Sharon Brades, Bev Barbour, Karen Hamilton, Wayne Gerson and Allan Barbour.

Karen Hamilton gave a general vote of thanks after which John Reid said a few words to bring an enjoyable evening to a close.

Reeveship Race In Nassagaweya

There's a race for the Reeveship shaping up in Nassagaweya.

Deputy-Reeve Bill Coulter announced this week he is considering running for the post of Reeve, but present Reeve Jack Robertson is also interested in the position again next year.

Deputy-Reeve Coulter runs for the Reeves' job at next Monday night's nomination meeting. Speculations are that senior councillor Dr. B. D. Young will step up to try for the job as Deputy-Reeve. Others on the council seeking reelection are William Mahon and Ross Gordon.

School trustees Claude Inglis, Horace Blithe and Jack McPhail are all in for reelection this year. The school board is elected for two-year terms, and the other two trustees were named in 1963 until the end of 1964.
