THREE TIMES A YEAR this scribe sticks his neck out and promosticates on the outcome of the world series, the Grey Cup or Lord Stanley's battered basin as the case may be. It's that time again and if it weren't so confusin' it'd be amusin'.

My crystal ball says Les Canadiens will wrap up the symbol of world hockey supremacy if they get past the Yoronto Maple Laufs. Chicago shouldn't have much difficulty with Detroit in the other semi-final in spite of the Hawks poor record in Stanley cup

However, don't bet on a Hab-Hawk finale. Punch Imlach's Leafs have been getting yeoman service out of Davey Keon in the last few games, Frank Mahovlich looks like he might have regained some of his horses and Johnny Bower, in spite of Charlie Hodge. is still the best netminder in the N.H.L.

It's going to be a toss-up between Toronto and Montreal with neither team having a big edge on the other. To this fuzzy cheeked scribe it looks like the outcome will depend a lot on which club sets the breaks.

The Plying Frenchmen, picked by many astute hockey men spring, has left Georgetown Golf to finish fifth, out of the playoffs, must be the Cinderella club this season. They finished first, a point ahead of Chicago, who looked like they were running away ahead of the pack before Christmas.
