Photo Hints

Mothers Make Ideal Family Photographers

Any mother who keeps a camera handy won't find herself telling a neighbor, "I wish I had a picture". She can have the picture, a story-telling picture, to share with friends and relatives now and in latter years, to recall happy moments.

Mother is the ideal family photographer because she spends more time with the children than anyone else. She's at home with the children when father's at work. She's around when picture-taking situations just naturally happen, when Junior makes mud pies, when daughter primpes in front of a mirror, when hup-otch is played on the front sidewalk.

Are you and daughter heading for the neighborhood park this afternoon? Take your camera and capture, on film, a day in the life of your child. Get a shot as you leave the house and then record the games and the fun that follows. With a camera especially a movie camera, mother is all set to film the action as it happens.

You'll want to vary the length of scenes, the angle of your camera, and the distance of your shots. You might look at Mary when she's climbing the steps to the slide, and then look down at her while she breezes to the bottom and plunks into a sand box.

At the swings, you'll have a chance to shoot a complete sequence. You can begin with a long shot, to establish a complete view of the location, and follow with a medium shot in this case, Mary sitting on the swing. Then, continue with a close-up of Mary's happy face. The final scene would be another long shot, with Mary jumping from the seat.

Movies or snapshots can provide a colorful record of your family life. By telling an interesting story, and shooting with care, you'll have pictures that your family and friends can enjoy for years to come.

Hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure cause about ninety per cent of all heart and circulatory disease, according to the Canadian Heart Fund.

SAFETY-FIRST

Hands, feet and eyes are involved in about 50 per cent of industrial accidents. Of these injuries, many could be prevented by the use of safety devices designed for protection of the worker. Hard helmets for construction workers, and goggles and face masks for welders and machinists will help to protect heads, face and eyes and should be worn wherever there is danger on the job.
