Comfort is:

When your wife throws away her collection of dry skin creams When John Junior hasn't had a cough or snuffle for months

When you wake up in the morning without sandpaper sinuses

In countless Canadian homes dry air causes problems. To solve such problems, all you need is—"comfort". As your gas company knows, comfort involves more than just heat. It involves humidity too. Here's how it works. Humidity is the amount of moisture per cubic foot of air. When air is heated it expands, along with the moisture it contains. The result is less moisture per cubic foot of air—therefore a lower relative humidity. The air becomes thirsty and draws moisture from the surroundings including your body. When moisture evaporates from your body, it takes heat away and you feel cool. You've probably heard how you always feel cooler in a dry climate than in a damp one. It's the same in your home. When the humidity is reduced, you feel cool. The family complains and you turn up the thermostat and pay a bigger heat bill. Comfort is when humidity and heat are properly balanced. You feel neither too hot nor too cold. Modern gas heating systems can give you the correct comfort level automatically, because gas heating controls humidity as well as heat. We'll help you achieve the proper indoor climate in your home . . . and save you money doing it. So call your Heating Contractor, Department Store or Gas Company. Phone or write to your local Gas Company for a free "Comfort Is" brochure. UNITED GAS LIMITED Gas makes the big (comfortable) difference
