Six-Inch Sapsicle Freak for Mid-May

The odd snowfury in May, maybe — but who would expect icicles hanging from a tree? Charles Binnie, R.R. 2, Acton, reported to the Free Press Monday night he was surprised to see a six-inch sap icicle hanging from a broken branch of a hard maple tree in his yard.
Unfortunately, by the time the Free Press reporter drove to the Binnie home Tuesday morning, high winds had blown down the icicle. — Just a small portion of the home-grown popsicle — or is it a sapsicle? — remained.
Mr. Binnie, who has a large maple bush of his own and for years tapped trees and made his own maple syrup, said it was the first time he had seen a sap icicle this late in the season. Weather cold enough to freeze the sap yet warm enough to have the sap running is certainly freakish for the second week of May.
