

Crafts display, sale draws 2500 to Hoey farm Saturday

On a perfect September afternoon, craftsmen displayed their wares at the lovely farm home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. N. Hoey in Nassagaweya all day Saturday. An estimated 2500 browsed among the booths and stalls for the first event of this kind.

All the craftsmen who displayed their work are professionals and work full-time at their art. The day was most successful and the Hoey's hope to hold another one some time.

Already well-known throughout this area for her silk screen printing, Elizabeth Hoey had a large and varied display in the outbuilding where she does her work.

Daphne Lingwood showed her beautiful leather jewellery, deftly fashioned figurines and wall plaques. Joan Alexander's unusual batiks — fabric printed in a special process — sold exceptionally well.

Jack and Lorraine Herman's unusual pottery ranged from large whimsical pieces to a table of "mistakes and experiments" at bargain prices. They were located under the huge, spreading elm which gives the Hoey's property its name — Elm Tree Farm.

Enamelling by Beth McLaughlin was another display.

Arthur Brecken showed fine silver jewellery and small objects. Marie Harney displayed lovely silver jewellery and stones and paintings as well.

Mabel Fells sold many articles of silk screen printing.

The two Hoey daughters took part in the showing: Martha worked at a potter's wheel and sold a few smaller items she has made. Carolyn demonstrated spinning and sold sheep skins heaped on an antique carriage. Her perch was beside the barn yard and her pet sheep came INTRIGUING POTTERY figurines are admired by two Acton shoppers, Mrs. Earl Cooper and Mrs. R. H. Elliott, at the Saturday sale and show at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. N. Hoey. Professional craftsmen showed fabrics, leatherwork, silver, pottery and paintings.

Mass resignation

22 nurses quit Health Unit

The long-threatened mass resignation of Halton County Health Unit nurses came true Monday afternoon, when 22 of the Unit's 26 public health nurses left work and refused to return.

The mass walkout timed to coincide with a similar walkout at the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Counties Health Unit at Cornwall, culminated a year-long fight to have their association, the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, set as a bargaining agent in their demand to negotiate a contract with the two Health Units.

It is unfortunate that health services to which the taxpayer is entitled will be curtailed, the nurses spokesman said following a meeting Sunday. The services include home visiting, school health and immunization programs, prenatal classes, child health centres, chest clinics, hospital visiting and other preventative health programs.

At the Sunday meeting the nurses reaffirmed their stand and prepared to walk off the jobs at 5 p.m. Monday — as they had warned the Board of Health they would do, in a letter written and mailed a month ago.

The Board's chairman, Deputy-Reeve R. R. Parker of Acton, had said on several occasions the Board is willing to sit down and talk with the nurses, and negotiate individual contracts. But the Board objected to the intervention in the dispute of Lloyd B. Sharpe, agent for the R.N.A.O. and has sternly refused to allow the Association to act as a negotiator for the nurses.

"The Board has repeatedly asked the nurses to become certified as a bargaining unit by the Ontario Labor Relations Board," Mr. Parker, Halton M.O.H. Director of Health Unit, said Tuesday evening. "No further meetings with the nurses had been scheduled and the Board has received no requests for any further meetings."

Supervisory nursing staff and two public health nurses remain on the job today, and the remainder of the office staff is working as usual, Mr. Parker said. Originally 23 nurses threatened to quit on September 12, but one has left the staff in the meantime so there were just 22 resigning Monday.
