DECKING THE HALLS
Occasioning with red and green, traditional at Christmas, traces back to the early use of red berryed green holly to "deck the halls".

GIFT FOR MOTOTZER
Mom may need a floor washer — but Christmas is not the time to give it to her. No matter how practical she may be, she would much prefer to receive something frivolous — something she wouldn't ordinarily buy for herself. It need not be expensive like a mink or a diamond, even though they're always nice. A tiny vial of ultimate fragrance is a likely winner. So is a beribboned or befrilled housecoat and maybe oodles and oodles of delicious smelling bubble bath.

MY BEST WISHES FOR A VERY
HOLY, JOYOUS CHRISTMAS
AND
HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS
NEW YEAR

Holiday "cup that cheers" could be "cup that queers"

Every year, liquor dispensaries have their warehouses bulging with bottled happiness which they hope to (and will) move out to be consumed in varying quantities by motoring holiday-makers.

In the old days, the annual seasonal "binge" was accepted with little danger or disruption to normal traffic, but as the years pass, and the ubiquitous automobile becomes a basic fact of living, this simultaneous use of alcohol and gasoline has developed a sinister potential for injury and sudden death when employed by the holidaying motorists.

Roads in Canada, during the Christmas season, pose a need for additional sternness and coordination with such characteristics which are viewed perceptibly by alcohol ingestion, in many instances not noticeable in the drinker.

Dominion Automobile Association has a vital interest in the safety of the Canadian motorist, and R. W. Trollope, president of the association, urges driving Canadians to adopt a rational, common-sense approach to holiday season drinking (and more important, drinking).

Mr. Trollope, quoting medical authorities on the subject, points out that even a single bottle of beer can befog the reflexes of the user to the point which makes the difference between having an accident and avoiding one.

An automobile driver is in complete charge of a lethal contraption which can inflict sudden death on his fellow-man (and himself) in an instant. Any agent which in any way retards that motorist's reaction to split second driving decisions should be avoided or treated with the caution it merits.

Everybody knows that it's only the "other fellow" who can't hold his liquor. It seldom occurs to him that he's the other fellow's "other fellow".

The oldest slogan of all is the best slogan of all for ebullient holiday-makers: "If you drink, don't drink; if you drink, don't drive" to which may be added "when in doubt, don't drive".

Choose a place for the Christmas tree which will not block access to doors or windows in the event of an emergency.

Wishing you a Christmas filled with the laughter of children and the rewards of dreams come true.
