Coroner's jury recommends strong laws be set for public use of swim areas

A coroner's jury, investigating the death of five-year-old Teresa VonZutven, of 2346 Rebecca Street, Oakville, Tuesday night of last week recommended local and provincial governments form strong laws governing the public use of swimming areas.

They decided that even though parents are mainly responsible for children at such to get some change for the areas, the operators of the grounds should also bear some of the responsibility by setting certain safety standards.

The girl drowned on June 17 in the Waterfalls Playground in Limehouse, in a pond that was not supervised by a lifeguard.

The jury also recommended that several suggestions of the Red Cross be adopted. Brian Patterson, supervisor of the Water Safety Service, visited the area three times to compile

When the girl drowned, though, he had gone into town refreshment booth as it was raining hard and very few people were in the water.

Mr. Prucyk explained that no permit is required to open and run an area such as his.

James Powell, sanitary inspector for Halton County Health Unit said there were no regulations that would allow the county to close that playground area for lack of safety precautions. Teresa was found floating face-down in a deep part of He suggested qualified staff the pond by two young boys. One of the boys, Jim Hachey, her daughter. She was close to tears as she explained that before she got to the shallow end, she saw a crowd gathering at the other end of the pond, and learned it was Teresa who had drown-

She suggested that Teresa had slipped into the deep water when she sat on the bank and tried to paddle her feet

Two nurses on the scene applied artificial respiration and cardiac massage in the ambulance on the way to Georgetown Hospital. Dr. Al Thompson, the attending physician at the hospital said that even though there was no sign of life when the girl arrived, they worked on her for an hour and a half and finally started her heart beating and had her blood pressure back near normal. At this point Dr. Thompson decided to have the girl sent to

"I felt she would be better handled in a larger centre," he

By the time the ambulance reached Oakville, however, her condition had become worse. She still registered some heartbeat, but her blood pressure had fallen.

In the hospital there, Dr. F. B Roberts said, several doctors tried all the available revival methods, but at 8.15, about an hour after arrival there, the girl was pronounced Dr. Waldorf, the pathologist who performed the autopsy, said that any attempt at revival would have been unsuccessful, and death was inevitable. Had the girl been revived, he said, there would have been "permanent, irreversible brain damage."

Crown Attorney Peter McWilliams commended the medical team for the "heroic" efforts in trying to save the girl. He also said that the county Medical Officer of Health should be able to close areas without adequate safety standards.

"It is abundantly clear there was an appalling lack of provision of water safety." he

The jury took about half an hour to reach its decision.

judge each case on its merit. Mr. Van Norman has been troubled by sewage backing up in his basement for the past four or five years but the trouble cannot be pinpointed. The committee felt the cheapest and quickest way to rectify the problem would be for the town to step in.

Mr. Van Norman said he could get no private contractors to do the work.

"Unfinished business from 1934," commented Councillor G. McKenzie about attempts by the town to settle the YM-CA ownership so the town can legally make alterations to the Present offices.

Councillor Charlie Perry told Council of the crowded town office and suggested emergeny measures must be introduc. ed to alleviate them.

It was proposed a special Act of Legislature be submitted which would make it legal for the Y board, a charitable body, to rent space to the town. The town would receive ownership of the Y building and an agreement with the board would be legally possible. Cost of passing the act would be $500.

The old arguments about the suitability of the Y for the town office were rehashed. Proposed terms of agreement with the Y if the Act was passed would allow the town to rent to the Y board for $1 a year and in turn the Y would sublet to the town for 10 years at $175 a month.

A motion authorizing a special Act be drawn up was pass-

A SMALL SLIT between the sidewalk and the nouse was all that was needed for these sunflowers to grow at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Al Lauder, Tidey Ave. The crack was just large enough for a seed to slip in and the slender stalks grew once they cleared it, thickening and reaching a height of almost six feet. Mr. Lauder thinks the seeds dropped in the crack from a bird feeder above.
