conditions of work for quality teaching and quality learning drew more than 100 teachers. board members and interested citizens from Milton, Acton, Erin and Georgetown to Georgetown District High School on a recent

Saturday. The day-long conference heard speeches from Tom Pherrill, assistant superintendent of secondary schools in North York, and H. J. A. Brown, business administrator and secretary-treasurer of the Toronto Township Board of Education. Following each of the talks, four discussion groups were formed.

Summarizing the conference, sponsored jointly by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation and the Ontario School Trustee's Council, groups generally reported a very worthwhile experience.

Several groups emphasized the need for effective communication between the board and the teachers. It was suggested further
