--It's leap year - and Thursday's the leap day. February 29 is a rarity that nicely interrupts the monotony of a 365-day year.

-- Mrs. Alf Long, R.R. 4, has had some response to the appeal for books, maps, games and money for the Northern Corps of teachers in remote schools. There's still a big carton in the United Church lobby for donstions.

-- Acton's strong musical inclinations surprised a visitor totown on Saturday, She hist, couldn't get over how many people were shopping in Watson's Music Store. Guitar lessons? No ... license plates, February 29 is the deadline.

-- Georgetown has backed out of the Central Ontario Regional Development Council membership it agreed to take out a few weeks ago. Councillors felt the membership fee, $981 was too.

-- Milton night school closed with Open House last week. They had an enrolment of over 200. It's been quite a few years now since night school classes in Acton were dropped. The committee in charge at the time thought they'd just sit back and wait for more public demand which didn't come.

-- For those election conscious workers who are still trying to sort out the federal electoral boundaries, a nine page folder listing the mans available on the subject, is available from the Map Distribution Office of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, 615 Booth St., Ottawa. The list is free. The maps are 50¢. The province of Ontario map is two sheets, one north and one south at 50¢ each. Listed also are the 264 electoral constituency maps for all federal elections.

Milton, Acton and Georgetown are in danger of being "planned off the map," by the provincial government, a Toronto business giant has warned. Speaking on planning at the annual meeting of the Milton Chamber of Commerce was Lt.-Col. G. A. Burton president of Simpson's Ltd. and a director of

* Health Unit Nursing Director Miss Grace J. Leavey presented a seport on her division's work, indicating the limited staff cannot meet the demands placed on it and is providing service. according to priorities and urgencies. They have 101 schools in Halton to visit. The nurses are also receiving many requests for visits to families to stress safety procautions against polsoning, and for public speaking engage ments. * It was learned that the Health Unit inspectors' work is growing with new regulations demanding inspections of all places where food is prapared, handled or stored. Chief Sanitary Inspector W. Powell said carrying out this regulation will triple the work of his staff, and may make it impossible to continue plumbing inspections.
