

TWO WATERFALLS leave a foamy froth on the Eramosa River's passage downstream between limestone banks in Rockwood's Conservation Park. The island resembles the "flower pots" on unique Flower Pot Island in Georgian Bay. Once these waters ran a thriving industry which now stands as a stark reminder that even the sturdiest enterprise is often left behind by "progress".

Cable TV gives optimum reception

Possible installation of a cable TV service in Acton was endorsed by council at the last regular meeting. But what exactly is cable TV? According to users it is the finest in television reception. It brings the viewer television entertainment via coaxial cable, with consistently good pictures and sound. Annoying 'fringe' or 'snowy' reception is alleviated. Cable television is safe and trouble-free. One of the big advantages is that it's simple to install. How does it work? First a large antenna with twin towers is erected on a suitable site which provides optimum reception of all available channels. In this case it is in Georgetown. Sophisticated electronic equipment receives and strengthens the signals, then feeds them into the coaxial cable for transmission, at the speed of light, directly to your television set. The cable, no thicker than a pencil, is heavily insulated for protection against electrical interference and severe weather conditions. Lightweight, transistorized amplifiers specially designed for cable television are placed throughout the system to maintain the strength and quality of both picture and sound. What about color reception?

Cable TV does much to enhance color, and reproduces it with the effect set manufacturers strive for when they design TV models. And with all this comes another bonus. With a special cable television connection to your FM set, you will enjoy excellent clarity on eight FM stations, seven in stereo, with a full range of sound. There is of course a monthly cost for this added service. Another advantage of cable TV is removal of ugly antennae from roof tops which improves the look of the street where you may live.

New brochures

Colorful brochures with maps and information on all neighboring municipalities are being distributed by Tyler Transport Limited. There are 2800 brochures on Acton, 2800 on Milton and 2800 in the townships of Esqueping and Nassagaweya. Ted Tyler Jr. has already taken some of the brochures to Esqueping and Milton councils, and will be handing out some more at Acton council meeting next week. In town, they will be available at no charge to those interested at the town office, service stations, the Free Press office and, of course, from the Tylers. The Hi Neighbor hostess will also be distributing them to new families in town. As well as detailed maps, each folder contains information about special features of the area.

GATEWAY TO THE ROCKWOOD Conservation Park has greeted thousands of visitors this year as the park becomes increasingly popular. The rugged beauty, etched by glaciers as they retreated northwards, is unique in this part of the province. (Staff Photo)

Let's Play Bridge

by Bill Coats

Shorter days and cooler nights are not the only signs that fall is here. The Acton Bridge Club has also opened its doors for the seventh season. It has always been our wish and hope that the Acton Bridge Club would provide a service for the people of Acton but we still draw most of our players from out of town. To those in Acton and vicinity who enjoy a game of bridge we again extend an invitation to try duplicate bridge on any Monday evening. The club meets at 31 Young St. Same time is 8 p.m. sharp. Here is a hand from the game last Monday night. The dealer was West and neither side is vulnerable.

few himself. West made up for his poor opening bid by making the best lead. If West opens a heart (the normal lead) East would be end played at trick one. On the club lead, declared played low from dummy and East won with the king. After cashing the heart ace, East got off the lead with a club. Declarer won the club and led one round of trump. A second trump was led from dummy but it was a low trump. East played low and declarer won. At this point declarer made his only mistake. East had shown up with the spade queen (not yet played out), the heart ace, and the club king. In view of West's opening bid, East cannot have the king of diamonds as well. But declarer tried to ruff a heart in dummy and East over ruffed. This was the third trick for the defense. All they needed was one more. If the lead could be put in dummy, West must score the diamond king. East didn't look too far ahead and led a club. Sure, dummy's clubs were all good but declarer wasn't going to make two mistakes on the same hand. He ruffed with his last trump in spite of the fact that he was ruffing a good trick. Now the diamond finesse was taken. Dummy's high trump took out East's last trump and dummy's hand was all good cards. How could East have changed all this? Instead of trying to put dummy on lead with a club, East should do it with a trump. If East leads the spade queen, it takes out South's last trump and places the lead in dummy's. Now, declarer must go down to defeat. Last week's winners at the Acton Bridge Club were: first, Bill Wardell and Cam Sinclair; second, Bob Dickson and Tom Warnes; third, Dick Prust and Duke Wilson, fourth Ken and Shirley Brown.

The bidding: West 1 H, North 2 H, East Pass, South 2 S; W-3 H, N-4 S, E-Double, S-All Pass. Opening lead—6 of clubs. West would have been much more effective if he had opened three hearts. This would have crowded the bidding. North is not really strong enough to cue bid hearts but with such a strong hand what else can he do? South showed excellent judgment in bidding his spade suit in this forcing situation. If North doesn't like spades he can bid his suit at the three level and if he likes spades, so much the better. East has every reason to double. His partners' opening bid should guarantee two defensive tricks and East has a
