

Pictures from Rockwood's past . . .

from the Richard Harris collection of photographs owned by Don Hilts

FROM TOBACCO to tea, Little store had them all. This photograph of the store on Rockwood's main street was taken in the 1920's.

A SMALL WHITE frame cottage stood beside the river in Rockwood, where a public park is now, many years ago. This old photograph was taken from No. 7 highway.

A STURDY OLD CAR — painted black, no doubt — is parked at Los Ayles' service station west of Rockwood on No. 7 highway.

Library Report

By Mrs. Isabel Watson

The readers, board and staff at the Acton Public Library wish to heartily thank Dr. and Mrs. Buckner for their bountiful gift of magazines and books. We shall all benefit by this addition to our reading.

Also we wish to call the attention of our young readers to a contest to be handed in by the second week of November. This is to celebrate Canada Book Week, and we hope to have entries from primary, junior and intermediate grades in the public schools. So children get busy and make a scrap book each, on any subject you choose. There will be some prizes and certainly originality of content will be one of the issues to be judged.

We are adding all the time to our store of new books. May we mention four on the social history of England from the time of (Luce) through to the year 1901. There are so many interesting illustrations in these books that they will make interesting reading as well as for study of these periods.

There is a new book on psycho-analysis "Imagination and Reality", edited by John D. Sutherland Ph.D., F.R.C.P.E. containing essays by Charles Rycroft. This is a book one must read to get the real depth of the subject.

"Life, Death and the Doctor" by Louis Lasagna, M.D. is a provocative book which demonstrates that the health problems of society and the physicians' role need continuing debate and reappraised for patients and doctors, alike.

"The Adding Up" by Elizabeth Holland is the story of a young boy from Edinburgh, Scotland, who finds himself in West Africa as an undercover agent to the Government of Ambria. This adventure in a quite different setting and different presentation.

For those readers who enjoy western stories we have a new one by Lewis B. Patten, "Death of a Gunfighter" with all the adventure of the old west in its pages.

Mary Hocking has written this new novel "A Time of War", giving a vivid description of a group of very young women on a Fleet Air Arm training station in the West Country of England.

"Fair Stood the Wind for France" by H. E. Bates is perhaps one of his finest novels. Dennis Wheatley has collected some choice horror stories and calls his book "First Book of Horror Stories". This will make a treat to look forward to for those readers who enjoy these tales of "strange doings".

Barbara Cartland has written a new romantic, historical novel "Love is Contraband". This takes place in the Napoleon era, and promises to be one that will be very popular.

"China in the year 2001" by Han Suyen, gives an inside view of contemporary China. She examines from a Chinese point of view the central importance of ideology and the thoughts of Mao Tse-Tung, not only for the influence on China to-day but also as one of the forces that will guide China to her as yet uncertain destiny. It brings to our attention that we throughout the rest of the world must understand what this nation of 700 million people is thinking, planning and doing.

"Prescription Laughter", edited by William Adler, an anthology of medical merriment, is a must for every one who enjoys a good hearty laugh.

And here is one for the mothers whose children say "I have nothing to do!"

"What To Do When There's Nothing to Do" has 601 tested play ideas for young children.

Paul Gillico has written a new one for children, "The Manx Mouse", whose varied adventures will certainly capture the young reader's attention.

"Handbook of Woodcarving and Whittling" by E. V. Handeur, needs no words to tell of it.

"Upside Down Day", "The Other Side of the Fences", "Chipper the Beaver", all are the last word in entertainment for our youngest readers.

Baha'is hear guest speaker

The Baha'is of Acton had Glen Eyford as guest speaker at their "Open House", Saturday evening at the Acton Y.M.C.A. Mr. Eyford is an associate professor at the University of Alberta and has recently returned to Canada from India, where he was a Colombo Plan Advisor at the University of Rajasthan.

He spoke on "World Order", a Baha'i concept, and a lively discussion followed his interesting talk which presented many new ideas for a new "World Order". Richard Harding of King chaired the meeting and Mrs. Tom Henderson of Rexdale served refreshments assisted by Miss Margaret McCrone and Mrs. Emily Roberts, both of Etobicoke.
