

NIAGARA FALLS doesn't change — but the road Harris took this photograph years ago, showing an uncluttered shoreline.

PERCHED PRIMLY by the banks of the stream are Mrs. W. Guild and Jean Torrance. They posed for the late Richard Harris on the Valley Road years ago.

MAIN ST. IN ROCKWOOD is pictured in the days before it was paved. The building on the left was a tire shop. On the top floor was the Terrace Gardens where dances were held every Saturday night. It's now Schneider's candy factory.

Wants burnt school for home council refuses, too near road

Nassagaweya council last week refused an application from H. Jacquemart to renovate a burnt out school house on the Fifth Line in Nassagaweya because of the building's proximity to the road. If the Township follows its plan to widen that road it would bring the building to within two feet of the road allowance. Reeve William Coulter suggested, "That is not a healthy situation for any home."

Mr. Jacquemart told council it was his intention to use the existing walls and foundation and to build a house valued at $20,000 and put the house up for sale. He said he had an agreement with a carpenter that he would finance the property, valued at $6,200 and the carpenter would build the home at no charge. Later they would sell the home and split the profit.

Council suggested Mr. Jacquemart would be better to demolish the existing structure and move the building back to comply with the Township's By-Law. S. W. Savage, Building Inspector for the township told council the Health Department had forbidden him to issue a building permit for the proposed plan.

Mr. Jacquemart left council suggesting they had a choice . . . they give him permission to build and have the eyesore removed, or put up with it for the next 50 years. He told council nobody would buy the property for the price asked if they could not make some use of the existing structure, a foundation and four walls. The building had been built in 1923 as a school and has since been gutted by fire.

Drowning danger

Right now seems to be a poor time to talk of water hazards and the danger of people drowning. Yet some of our Ontario farm people the hunters will down this month, unless they take care to load the boat properly; wear life jackets; handle the boat safely; and take the precautions recommended by the water experts.

So have fun hunting, but play it safe.
