According to the latest figures, Canadians are still the most talkative people in the world when it comes to telephones. Mind you, Americans are running a close second. In 1967, Canadlans averaged 667.7 calls per person; that's .7 more than our friends south of the border. Mum's the word in Burma, however; citizens there made the least number of calls - an average .7 each in 1967.

Of the 222 million telephones in the world in that year, more than 103 million were located in the United States. Canada was in sixth place with 8.4 million phones in service - that's 40.65 telephones for every 100 people. The average for the world is 6.4 phones for every 100 persons.

The statistics are compiled annually by -- the-American Telephone and Telegraph Company and are one year behind because it takes close to 12 months to gather figures from all parts of the world.

With all those calls - almost 3,000 for a family of four - you might wonder if you'll soon wear the markings right off you telephone dial. It isn't likely, because they aren't painted on the surface. They're molded right into the dial in a two-step operation. First a plastic plate is formed with spaces left in the shape of the numbers, letters and dots. Then the spaces are filled with a contrasting shade of plastic. So dial away. It will take a great many fingers dialing a great many calls before the markings on your dial begin to wear away.

If I were to ask where to find the noislest place in the world. I het I'd get many different answers. But I'm not going to ask because, if there is one thing that's easy to find these days, it's noise.

Quiet? Now that's another story. Still there are a few remaining havens where quiet reigns supreme, and one of them is the anechoic chamber or "Silent Room" at Northern Electric's Research and Development Laboratory in Ottawa. The room is shielded from 99 per cent of noise by thick masonry walls, isolation from the building in which it is housed and elaborate acoustical filters lining the room and ventilation system. The Silent Room is used for precise measurements of speech and hearing, and for work on receiving, producing an transmitting sound.
