A young child may start feeling a bit lonesome when he is put to bed by himself, so he finds it comforting to take things with him, says the federal health department publication, "Sleeping Habits". It may be a stuffed doll, a particular blanket, several little trucks or even bigger toys.

It is all right to let him, but observe common sense safety precautions. Things should be cleared away after he has dropped off.

be picked off. . The bills that are presently in circulation are of good quality, The past few weeks have seen coloring in the area of the Queen's portrait. The backs of these bills are very good, and are hard to tell from the real thing. If in doubt about a certain bill, compare it not counterfeited.

If you see somebody trying to pass a counterfest bill, call the police office and report it. Try to get the licence number of the car and a good description of the passer. Above all, study 10 and 20 dollar bills so you can easily pick out a phoney. It's to your advantage, only you lose when you accept a counterfeit bill.
