Would form Halton Museum Auxiliary

Plans are underway to form a Museum Auxiliary to work with the Halton County Museum at Kelso, and an appeal went out this week for volunteers willing to contribute some of their time and talents to the project.

Letters have gone out to several Halton organizations, appealing for members to launch an auxiliary for the Museum. The Museum's present budget and staff make it impossible to do everything the museum should be doing, the letter explains, and now that the Halton County Board of Education has expressed a desire to use the museum's facilities for education, the staff should be spending more time on restoration and research.

"This is an opportunity for many people of varied interests and capabilities to express themselves in this field," says the museum's director Dr. H. J. Newman. They are especially looking for people interested in crafts, flowers, floral arrangements and herb gardening.

Halton Museum was opened in 1969 in the old barn on the Duff Alexander farm in the centre of Kelso Conservation Area. It has grown and grown, more buildings have been opened, and the crowds have increased year after year. The County of Halton Centennial project was a carriage house that opened there in 1967. Today the museum is renowned as one of the finest county museums in Canada, yet museum officials admit they are still suffering from "growing pains".

Anyone in Halton wishing to offer their aid in the proposed auxiliary is invited to contact Dr. Newman or his assistant Mrs. Erla Brittain at the museum, or telephone 854-9868.

You have to see danger to avoid it, says the Ontario Safety League. Keep your eyes moving when you drive.
