settlers here and there. Scott, the man referred to in the students' letter, was not looked upon as a hot-headed Orangeman. He was not educated but murdered in cold blood. There is a lot of difference in the times of today and in the days of the 1880s. Those were the days when Manitobe was new and buffalo ran in thousands and nothing could have been planted to eat. This stuff the writers not about the crucifix and that he never killed anyone might be so, but he instigated murders just the same. If he expelled the Penians from his ranks how did he distinguish them from other half breeds?

Riel went to Montana, was an American subject, married another half breed over there and came back because he was a trouble maker. If the buffelo had not been exterminated, Canada, with the population she has today, could not have been fed without vest importation of food. Why call Louis Riel the "Father of Manitoba?" His murders were perpetrated. He murdered innocent people as far renegade no matter who says he
