It has been my companion for several years during the labors and exposures of my missionary work in Algoma. Well it is for old and young to have it in store against the time of need, which so often comes without warning.—Geo. Ruskin, Missionary, Toronto, Ont.

FIGHTING PARSONS.

HOW THE REV. MR. BERRY FOOLED THE REV. MR. REED.

They Were Scouts of Opposing Forces During the Civil War—The Commander Who Issued Orders in a Loud Tone and Sang Hymns to His Soldiery.

"Have you ever heard a good story about Mercer Reed, the brilliant Upper Canadian preacher and Methodist orator, who has been so prominent with him in Toronto for 30 years," said a Kingsmill man who has been acquainted with him for 30 years.

"Mercer Reed went into the army a private, but was a captain within two years and in 1861 was picked out by companion of colonel of an east Tennessee regiment. He was a wonderful scout for one in battle or in brilliant charge, the men of either army were wont to say, but when there was nothing to fight about Reed would go scouting to Dixie. Captain Berry was a scout for the Confederates and he and Reed were pitted against each other in many a desperate encounter.

"All Saturday night and Sunday morning Reed and his men were in the saddle, under orders to be in Knoxville by Monday morning. Reed had received word that Captain Berry, with a large force of Confederates, was coming to attack Knoxville from Arkansas. Reed's instructions were to take these men and push in the direction of the enemy as rapidly as your animals can carry you. I want you to make at least 50 miles today. When you meet the enemy, return without delay and report, and if you collide without allowing him to discover you.'

"The captain and his 20 followers, all of whom resembled their commander in one respect—every one of them being a daredevil—rode through the Union picket line soon after sunrise. Soon after sunset, when the shades of night appeared and the Tennessee mountain whose base they were nearing looked gloomy and forbidding, they heard something that greatly added to their gloom, fearless though they were. It was the one word

"'Halt!'

"The speaker was on the side of the mountain, out of sight and not more than a quarter of a mile away. It had been a perfect day and was a perfect evening. The voice rang out as clear as a bell. Reed satisfied himself quickly that the command had not been intended for his force. His opinion was confirmed when the same voice was heard giving these directions:

"'Lieutenant, tell Colonel Jones of the Tenth Tennessee to go into camp on that side of the road. Have Colonel Bailey take his regiment into camp on the other side of the road.'

"The Union scouts, upon hearing the general's directions for the disposal of the brigade for the night, moved a few rods from the road, dismounted, fed their horses and tried to get a little rest before starting on the 30 miles' ride to the Union lines.

"An hour later they heard the same voice, a little farther up the mountain, as follows:

"'First Arkansas brigade, if you will give me your attention I will comply with the very general request of the command to sing.'

"Then for half an hour, in a voice that was as clear and sweet as that October atmosphere, he sang hymn after hymn, old fashioned ones such as the Yankee boys had once heard in their northern homes. When the singing ceased, the scouts brigade commander told his men to go to sleep and get a good rest, as they would be called upon on the morrow to make a forced march of many miles and possibly send it with a hard battle.

"Not long after that Captain Reed's scouting party started back to camp, reaching it about 10 o'clock the next day. He received the discovery of an Arkansas brigade and set to active preparations for a coming battle, but it did not occur. The First Arkansas brigade did not keep its engagement.

"The following winter Captain Reed found himself in charge of a large number of Confederate prisoners. Among them was one who was much given to singing hymns. Reed thought he had heard the voice. Approaching the singer, he engaged him in conversation with the following result:

"'Have we met before?'

"'Not that I know of, sah.'

"'Your voice has a familiar sound.'

"'Then he thought of the hymns he had heard on the side of that Tennessee mountain.

"'Do you belong to an Arkansas brigade?' asked Reed.

"'No, sah. I'm a Tennessee soldier.'

"'Were you with an Arkansas brigade when it was encamped on a Tennessee mountain last October?' He named the locality.

"'Were you singing hymns and then tell the men of your brigade to sleep and rest, for the next day they would have a long, hard march or something a fight?'

"'I sang that night, sah, and made the remarks.'

"'And you are'

"'No, sah, I'm not a brigade, sah.'

"'Are you the man who was with me on a scout? You saw a force of 25 or 30 and during to leave just then and knowing that we could not fight so large a party we resorted to that harmless trick to halt the enemy and give us a chance for a short rest, after which we rode back to camp faster than we left it.'

"'What is your name, please?'

"'Berry, Captain Berry of the Tennessee cavalry, sah.'

"'Captain Berry, I'm glad to meet you. I had command of the party you mention. Your ruse worked. I marched right back to camp, and we got ready to fight a large body of Arkansas troops. You were getting away from me with as much zeal as I was displaying in getting away from your command. Guess you and I had not better say much about our experiences on that October scout. I've got something as good as the commissary keeps in this canteen. Try it.'

"'Thank you, sah. I never drink.'

"'A Tennessee soldier and don't drink?'

"'I am also a minister of the gospel, sah.'

"The two captains became warm friends."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Clinching Statement.

A Cure That Was Permanent.

The Medicine Used Was Paine's Celery Compound.

Day after day bring fresh proofs, and we are led to the point of asking ourselves that question, "Is it safe to assert that many of the published cures are forgeries, and others will hardly bear the light of investigation."

The cures attributed to Paine's Celery Compound have stood the test of the closest investigation, and have all the ring of genuineness and honesty about them, and the original facts can be seen at any time by an interested public.

In the above paragraph we have briefly mentioned that the cures made by Paine's Celery Compound are permanent. Another proof has just been received, the time from Mr. D. J. Kilbride, Postmaster Riverdale, P. E. I., testifying to the permanency of his cure. His case was one of the most serious and critical ever given to the public, and his complete cure astonished his many friends and the residents of his town.

Mr. Kilbride says: "Over three years ago I gave a testimonial for Paine's Celery Compound after it had cured me.

"To-day I am in splendid condition and have not been sick a single day since I used the famous Paine's Celery Compound.

"I certainly owe my present health and strength to your medicine, and I am fully convinced it saved me from a condition bordering on insanity. I can now sleep and eat well, and I thank God for Paine's Celery Compound and the great change.

"I have received and answered 250 letters since my testimonial was published. Those letters came from all parts of Canada and the United States. It has been a pleasure answering these letters from sufferers, and I trust my recommendation of Paine's Celery Compound will help suffering humanity."

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Longfellow's First Poem.

MR. FINNEY'S TURNIP.

[Longfellow composed the following poem at half an hour, when only 9 years old.]

Mr. Finney had a turnip,
And it grew, and it grew,
And it grew behind the barn
And the turnip did no harm.

And it grew, and it grew,
The finest ever by Dallas;
Then Mr. Finney he did pull
And boiled it in the copper.

Then he fed it to the pigs,
Which like it better than figs;
And the pigs got very fat
And they ate the turnip up.
