Special Announcement.
Andrew Carnegie will pass through Toronto on Friday, March 6, at 4:00 p.m. in gold to each resident who is at the station at four o'clock. Nailing the bulletin securely, I go home. On the way back I meet Mr. Always Opposite, O. G. P. Mr. Always Opposite boasts a little which is announced by the letters following his name. "Mr. Always Opposite," I tell him of the offer, his eyes bulge as a man who sees a ghost. "Five thousand dollars!" he splutters. "Why, it's a fortune!"

Commercial Commission.
The Commercial Commission has been called to order. The Commission has been called to order. The Commission has been called to order.

Mr. Blank's Compliments.
Mr. Blank presents his compliments to Miss Dash and requests the pleasure of her company at the theatre Thursday evening next. "Awaiting eagerly reply, and hoping it will be favorable to our proposition, we are,"

Mr. Blank's Compliments.
The writer was the junior partner in a large manufacturing company. He had written many letters that day for his company and signed the name of the firm and the stereotyped phrases of commerce ran off his pen from habit.
