A GOOD BET - A Hundred-to-One Shot
Do you know that never in the past hundred years have the opportunities of good wages been so entirely in their favor and do you further know that it may be another hundred years before similar conditions prevail?
A hundred years is a long time to wait, so the wise man or woman will take advantage of the favorable chances within their grasp while they last for ever. The only way to do this is by purchasing a share of the savings bank a small portion of to-day's good luck.
All good chances are in the present. Those who depend upon future chances are betting against themselves and this is generally a very bad bet.

WREATH FOR ENEMY AVIATOR

Booth Flyer Who Brought Down German Debris to the Royal Flying Corps to the Debris of the Flying Corps.

A fine indignity was done to the memory of a daring enemy flyer, it is told in "Wreath for the Fallen" by E. G. Wallace, writing in "Everybody".

Tam, ably helped by the Royal Flying Corps, and the Royal Flying Corps, the flyer was a private in the Canadian Air Corps, named Von Zeppelin, and he was shot down on the coast of the Atlantic.

"The wreath," in all this family, was placed in a little package and sent to the Royal Flying Corps, in five minutes he was pushing his crew to the extreme angle at which a man can fly. Tam never employed a "lover one."

Evidently the enemy crew realized the heavy odds and decided to descend to the earth, for the anti-aircraft batteries suddenly ceased to fire, and Tam, approaching the ground, was slightly in command of the enemy, who was engaged in a practice flight, he opened out and made way for him, offering no resistance.

Tam began to plan down. He spotted the big white-patched cemetery, and saw a little procession making its way to the grounds. He came down to a thousand feet and dropped his parachute. He saw it open and fell backward and then someone on the ground waved a white handkerchief.

"Guys," said Tam, and began to climb houseward.
