Politeness Traced Back to the Primitive Times.

Ancient Peoples, as Mark of Submission, Uncovered Body and Surrendered Their Clething.

We consider a man a gentleman who takes off his hat to a lady. At least the act is thought to be gentlemanly, polite. The origin of this custom, like so many other customs common among primitive times, says the Batt Lake

When a person was made captive his conqueror stripped him of his weapons and clothing and left him without anything he could call his own. The captive was thus made a slave, his lack. of clothing being evidence of his subfugation. We need only to look at the schiptures of the Assyrings to see the truth of the fact. And to Isafah 20:24, we find the following statement: "And Touth hath walked naked and barethe king of Assyrin lead away the The Empirels debt, forevermore is writ Egyptians prisoners and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, halted surrender of the clothing among primt-And mothers yet unborn the tale shall tive and ancient peoples as a mark of submission. The next step is the unerence. There are all degrees of uncovering, though often only the most valuable parts of the clothing are taken off in the presence of superiors. It must be remembered that this act of uncovering the body was ceremonial in nature and used to show reverence to a superior. Then came the use of the ceremonial to propitiate the dead. We can see a remnant of this most any time. At funerals and in our graveyards men take off their hats. They still take off their hats on entering churches and before the images of Christ and the Madonna. In times of chivalry men raised their hats to ladies to show reverence. But this was only superficial in meaning. A knight would ride down a poor pensant woman carrying a large burden and never think of helping her-least of all would be think of taking off his hat to her. However, if he heard of And He Got Well and Strong. some beautiful damsel of his own class in the slightest danger, imaginary or real, he would go to her and, hat in hand, kneel and dedicate himself to her

I learned off his hat to his mother, yet he of Vinol and gave it to him. It has shows this deference to his "best girl." restored his health and strength and After all it is only form, and politehe has gained in weight."-Mrs. ness should go deeper than this. However, the form persists, and it is of some historical interest to remember that it is a remnant of the primitive stripping of a captive by which process was expressed the fact that he yielded up all he had. Taking off the hat to a wealthy girl means, occasionally, not only the yielding up of all you have, but the getting of all she has. Ceremony is often nothing but a hard calculation in regard to personal results, especially where self-aggrandizement is the ultimate aim of the polished individual.

Writing in Everybody's, Maude Radford Warren enumerates some amusing incidents showing the effects of limited war prohibition in England. One evening the author witnessed the following race against time that was staged near Victoria station, London, at an hour when traffic is thickest: "Presently a shouting and cursing arose at the center of the intersecting streets. People furned, peering and the trame perpreliess of thundering trucks and sliding cabe and obstruct log pettenytons, come a Scotchman His aves neer glandy and staring; his kilts were fring; his knees were twitpublic house: It he could get a hand and around the house.

MAY KEEP ENGAGEMENT RING Jersey City Judge Rules in Favor of

Girl Whose Intended Sought Return of Sparkler. There can be no Indian givers on the Jersey side of the Hudson, so ruled a judgo in Jersey City, writes a New York correspondent. As a result of the deckien a roung swain is out a $150 diamend ring, which be wanted a blue-eyed, petite blonde to return to

The two were engaged, and, according to custom, he placed the sparkler in question on her left hand. They then quarreled because she, according to his testimony, preferred the tango, jazz and foxtrot to sitting on a sofa and discussing their future. Therefore he broke off the engagement and demanded his presents linek. The judge was called upon to decide whether no engagement ring was a gift outright or merely a gift contingent upon the fulfillment of a promise o wed. The court then arranged a ittle "Solemon judgment" skit that worked to perfection, so far as the judge and the young woman were con-

The Matterhorn. The Mattechern was the favorite peak of these who "went in" for the huzardous sport of mountain climbing in the Swiss Alps. Now reports say that there is no more mountain climbing being done. It is easy enough to guess why, writes Niksah. For those who went around the world looking for hazardous occupations before the war there is now no need to make extended search, to stop at expensive hotels, or to hire a retinue of guides. Nincteen nations offer the adventurer more or less of a salary along with board, lodging and bospitat facilities for the pleasure of risking his neck. No wonder mountain climbing has fallen off. There are those who say that it will never again regain its old high state. They rather think aviation will attract most of the devotees who survive the nar. But your true mountaineer laughs at such a suggestion. For him there is no thrill to replace the one he feels as he swings by his fingertips over a 500-foot drop. French Aristocracy Works.
