

NOT UNDERSTOOD

Not understood, we move along asunder.
 Our paths grow wider as the seasons creep;
 Along the years we marvel and we wonder Why life is life. And then we fall asleep—
 Not understood
 Not understood, we gather false impressions
 And hug them closer as the years go by Till virtues often seem to us traps and missions
 And then we rise and feel and understand—
 Not understood
 Not understood—how trifles often change us—
 The thoughtless sentence or the facial slight
 Destroy long years of friendship and bring us
 And no one would have felt a breeze
 Not understood
 How many cheerless, lonely hearts are aching
 For lack of sympathy and aid, day by day
 How many cheerless lonely hearts are breaking
 How many noble spirits pass away—
 Not understood
 O God! That men could see a little clearer,
 Or judge less harshly where they cannot see.
 O God! That men could draw a little nearer
 One another, They'd be nearer Thee—
 And understand.

MANY BEAUTIFUL tributes to the mothers and women of the Empire have been given, but few finer ones than the following—

Across the sunlit sky of joyous spring
 There drifts a fleeting cloud:
 A shadow falls and brings To me the thought of many a mother in sorrow bowed.
 All nature breathes its sympathy divine
 The very rustling of the leaves is settled,
 And birds pay tribute to the solemn hour with voices fine;
 'Tis the world of Love with reverence is filled.

The author of the above little verse is Gunner J. Rolph Morden, of the 43rd Howitzer Battery, which was organized by Col. McCrae, and is known as the Presbyterian battery Col. McCrae is the father of the late Major Dr. McCrae, who wrote the beautiful ode, "In Flanders Fields". Gunner Morden, a Halton lad, was a student in arts and philosophy at the University of Toronto when he enlisted with some thirty fellow students. He had reached his 19th year, when his battery arrived in England and has been in the firing line over two years.
 While taking observations one evening as the sun was sinking, the scene of the "hallowed spot" met his gaze. His thoughts were of many of his dear companions resting peacefully, but his main thoughts were for the mothers far away from the scene of "mystic charm".
 Like the lads across the sea his heart saw the dear mothers watching and waiting for their boys return.
