QUALITY FRESH AND CURED

the Surplus

Win this war every ounce of the. strength of each of the allied nations must be put forth to meet the organized, trained and disciplined efficiency of the Central Powers that gigantic, ruthless force which is the result of fifty years of planning and preparation.

And every ounce of every allied nation's strength is in the hands and brains and hearts of the individuals of each nation, because they are free peoples.

Now the individuals of each nation must live as well as fight, therefore a proportion of the effort and material of each nation must be diverted from war purposes to living necessities,

So the less each individual takes for himself or herself for personal use the more effort will there be left for fighting and winning the war.

Every cent you spend represents that much effort because somebody must do something for you in order to earn that cent-somebody's effort must be given to you instead of to the war.

Therefore the less you spend—the less of somebody's effort you take for your individual use—the more will you leave in the national surplus for war effort.

The war can be won only by the surplus strength of the allied nations. The money each individual saves represents that surplus strength.

So the truly loyal Canadian will use less, spend less, and save more, to help to win the war.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspa-per Syndicate.) In the country, when a young man and a young woman are courting, it is referred to as "settin' up together." Abe Wright and Polly Andrews had set up" a hundred nights in her futher's farmhouse kitchen before they became engaged. The son or dans his of a furmer is not as upp to rush into love and matrimony as a young man dwelling in a town. There may not be as much formallty between them, but they look upon matrimony more seri-

There are a score of object lessons daily before their eyes. A farmer, to succeed, must be ever rising early and tolling late. His horses or his oxen get more rest than he does. He can know very little of the comforts and pleasures of life and see to his acres

And if he works long hours his wife works longer ones. Her work must be done on time as well as his. She may live within five miles of a village and yet not enter it once a year. He may be a subscriber to a county paper, and yet she cannot spare the time to read its contents. The two young folks saw and experienced all this and much more, and yet the instincts and sentiments of humanity brought them together. They would marry, as thousands of others in their situation had done, and hope that their future might work out bet-

Miss Polly said "yes" to the proposal of marriage, but the very next day she admitted to her mother that sometimes she thought she loved Abe and sometimes she thought she didn't. She had never been ten miles away from home. The only men she had ever come in contact with had been of her class, or agents or peddlers. She knew there was a big world outside of hers, but she had never peeped at it. She had a bit of romance about her, and sometimes she longed to see the brave men and fair women that the books told ber about. Abe Wright was going to marry and acquire a farm of his own. Therefore, he whistled as he went about his work. He had heard that a girl sometimes went back on her pledge, but he was as sure of Pelly Andrews as he was of the oun. One day the girl ran over to Farmer Waldron's on an errand. She found a strange young man there, who was introduced to her as Brian Montgomery. Even if he hadn't been good-

Mr. Brian Montgomery, from New York, Chicago and Boston, as he announced, must surely be one of those brave and gallant men she had read and dreamed of. When Miss Polly had departed for home, Mrs. Waldron said to the cousin : "New, Brian, you must not set out to turn that girl's head. She is engaged to a steady young farmer, and you mustn't be the cause of a quarrel

"Oh, it will be a mild-a very mild firtation," he laughed in reply. "How can I put in a month here and not filrt with the only girl for a mile around?" And a day or two later the young man came over to the house of Farmer Andrews and introduced himself and made himself very much at home. "Do you like him, mother?" somewhat anxiously queried. Polly, after their caller had departed. "Isn't he what they call fresh?" was asked in reply. "Why, how can you say that? It is simply that he has self-confidence." "One would think that he had known us for a year." "But he was trying to put us at our

The "War Chauffeuse." Many enthusiastic reports have come rom the other side about the excellent work that women are doing as drivers of motorcars, but that there is another side to the picture is suggested by a testimonial recently incorporated in an advertisement of a British automobile manufacturer. Sailor Invents Fire Escape.

One of the boys aboard our navy's fleet has invented a fire escape which is similar to the rope ladders used aboard ships. His principal object was to provide a collapsible fire esconveniently arranged at the window of a dwelling. It con sts of a centhiner hinged to the sill in such a manner that by opening the window and folding the container on its hinge the metal ladder may be unfolded and dropped.
