An Advertisement by Charles Dickens

THARLES DICKENS is one of the world's great teachers. Here is what he has to say in one of his books:

> "My other piece of advice, Copperfield," said Mr. Micawber, "you know. Annual income £20, annual expenditure £19. 19. 6-result, happiness. Annual income £20, annual expenditure £20. 0. 6-result, misery. The blossom is blighted, the leaf is withered, the God of Day goes down upon the dreary scene, and-and in short you are forever floored. As I am.'

The saving of a part of one's income was always a good policy.

Prudent men and women have always maintained a margin of saving.

But to-day we must go farther in our efforts to save than ever before.

To-day it is a matter of the gravest importance that each Canádian seek ways and means to economize by cutting down expenditures for unnecessary things, saving the money he spends on things he could do without, so that when the Nation needs to borrow money he will be in a position to do his full duty.

of leather will not continue long.

There is war-shortening work waiting for every dollar that can be saved.

TF Charles Dickens were writing to Canadians to-day he would probably give us advice to this

"My other piece of advice, Canadians, you know. No matter what percentage of your annual income you have prebe to save more. The advantage of so doing is threefold: By the practice of economy you conserve the material and labor which must be devoted to the grim tash before us; you cultivate the priceless habit of thrift; you gather more and more money to lend to the Nation for the prosecution of the war to a quick and .certain Victory."

But Mable's voice was as calm as kitten's slumber as she answered the telephone at ten-thirty the next norning, and I regret to say that she slipped her hand over the transmitter and giggled, when she heard the voice of her employer on the wire. "Are you ill this morning, Mise Wells?"

"Oh, no," blithely. "Well-er-you were late-and-Ier thought you might be ill."

"I thought I was fired," said Mable. "Fired? Oh, no. and you see, I can't seem to find anything this morning. If you could arrange to get over as soon as possible, Miss Wells, I would appreciate it" Thirty minutes later Mable entered the office and pitched into her work. There was a pile of bills to be checked off, and checks to write for each bill, besides a dozen letters. The bills were statements from Billy Hobb's creditors, and one of the letters was to Billy himself. The letter was of Mabel's own composition; and it was to

SAYS ANT IS "CHUCKLEHEAD"

Swedish Naturalist Now Comes Ferward to Destroy Insect's Long-Established Good Reputation.

The ant has been greatly overrated, in the opinion of Rich Ere. a Swedish naturalist. Solomon set the fashion with his famous admonition to the sluggard, and the ant has been living under false pretenses ever since. For, as a matter of fact, it is a hopeless chneklehead, and to consider its ways is no way to become wise.

Mark Twain arrived at this conclusion many years ago, and science now joins hands with him in the person of Mr. Ege, who publishes the results of g series of experiments with ants. He disposes first of the insect's supposed uncanny power to recognise other tenants of its own anthill. Mr. Ege washed ants in ether, dipped them in liquid gained by pressing a number of ants from another hill, and put them back among their own friends, who promptly fell upon them and ejected them. He took ants 50 times larger than the inhabitants of a certain anthill, washed them and treated them in a liquid pressed from ants of that hill, and then placed them in it. The Lilliputian insects did not recognize the giants as invaders. Mr. Ege concludes, therefore, that the supposed remarkably sharp recognitional powers of the insects are simply a matter of scent and inherited reflexes. Ants removed from familiar paths blunder blindly along, with no sense of distance or direction, until they strike a trail made by themselves or other ants. In many tests made by Mr. Ege the insects disclosed "no more intelligence than is to be found in the digestive processes of human beings." in other words, he found nearly all their acts are but movements by reflexes, unconnected with intelligence.

Unfortunate "Seconda."

One of the superstitions of peror William II relates to the "If" in his title. He fears that some time he may be compelled to share the fate of other "Beconds," of whom a long list could be easily compiled from the nages of European history.

Among a few of the unfortugates was Richard II and Edward II. Napoleon II. Lopis II of Bavaria, Alexander II and Nicholas II of Russie and Abdul Hamid II of Turkey.

J. A. TRACY, Secretary
