Wriglesworth—Walsh
A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, March 10th, at Mountain View Farm, when Mrs. Cora Walsh, daughter of P. D. Hartley, became the bride of Norman Wriglesworth, of Ashgrove, Rev. A. E. Marsh, B.A., officiating. At 12.30 noon, the bride entered the drawing room, leaning on the arm of her father. She looked lovely in a simple and artistic gown of pearl satin, with overdress of crepe-de-chêne, and she carried a beautiful sheaf of cream tulle. Her attendants and sweet party gracefully entwined with white ribbon. The Lutheran Wedding March was rendered in piano and violin duet by Misses Jean and Lillian Hartley, sisters of the bride. Miss Anna Panabaker, of Heslop, played the wedding march. The bride while congratulations were being given, and during the signing of the register Miss Lillian Hartley sang "Because." The house was prettily decorated in bryonias and daffodils, the drawing-room window, in front of which the ceremony was conducted being banked with ferns and flowers. The happy couple stood beneath an arch entwined by ivy, with ribbon and holly. After a sumptuous wedding dinner and the usual toasts, Mr. and Mrs. Wriglesworth left for their short trip east. The bride was wearing a navy blue suit with close dark hat. The groom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of silver and to the young lady attendants, strings of pearls. On their return the young couple will reside on the homestead previously occupied by the groom's parents at Ashgrove, near Georgetown.
