This method of getting at William II. will do as well any other under the circumstances. It does not materially matter just what the charge against him may be so long as he is delivered up to the allies and brought before the bar of justice to answer for his partici pation in the great war. The idea is to get the facts before the world the land is too soft for farming and the German government will be asked to produce all the evidence bearing on the case for presentation at the trial.

It is a foregone conclusion that the court will decide that the exkaiser is guilty. Facts already, before the public prove his culpa-bility too clearly for there to be any mistake about it. The question is, what will the punishment be? Banishment has been suggested, as was done with Napoleon and it is possible that this will yet be the ex-kaiser's fate.
