LONG IN HOLY CITY

AMERICAN RESIDENT OF JERUSALEM FOR MANY YEARS.
M. M. Whelan First to Welcome British Troops When They Entered—Was Representative There of the Bible Society.

Although it is a year since Allenby's victorious army entered Jerusalem and the greatest Christian shrine in the world was freed forever from the clutches of the infidel Turk, one of the most striking episodes of all those events that marked the entry has only recently become known.

To Americans this episode is of especial interest, since it came as the climax of perhaps the most picturesque of all the many services that have been rendered by the allied nations, and to humanity generally, by individual Americans, from General and Brand Whitlock down, since the beginning of the war.

For nearly three years, or from early in 1915 until the deliverance of Jerusalem in December, 1917, one of the oldest and most famous of British organizations remained in unbroken ignorance as to what had become of its "dear old home" in the Holy City. This organization is the British and Foreign Bible Society, which like its great sister organization in the United States, exists for the purpose of distributing the Good Book among Christians in every part of the world.

In February, 1915, or soon after Turkey threw her lot with the central powers, the Bible society's depot in Jerusalem, which contained many thousands of volumes, had to be abandoned. The workers there were brought to Egypt on an American warship. From that day until quite recently nothing whatever was known regarding the fate of the depot or its contents. It was assumed that both the depot and the workers had been destroyed by the Turks. But then came a letter from the society's secretary at Port Said in the London, Scotland, the first British regiment to enter the Holy City. In this officer's letter the striking story was told of how a respectable American resident of Jerusalem, by name M. M. Whelan, came forward spontaneously after the abandonment of the Bible society's depot, took up his residence therein and consequently "carried on" as he considered.

"It may interest you to know," this officer wrote, "that as I entered Jerusalem with the first troops, I was met by a quaint old American, named Whelan, an elderly man of about 60 years of age, who represented the Bible society, and presented me with a beautiful copy of the Scriptures."

Beyond the fact that M. M. Whelan is a naturalized Irish citizen of the United States, and that he had been living in Jerusalem for several years before the war, little is known by the Bible society at present regarding the picturesque character to whom it owes so great a debt of gratitude. It is not even known from what part of the United States he comes. The secretary has, however, received a photograph of its venerable American benefactor, which shows him to be a truly patriarchal type.

Tragic Grains of Sand.
Michael Faraday died in 1867, but one of his disciples is with us still. Sir William Crookes, one of the most illustrious scientists, has been celebrating his 56th birthday.

The Crookes vacuum tube is as well known among scientists as the telephone. We owe to it every electric lamp in the world, except the arc lamps. It led to electric lighting in the house, to the discovery of previously unknown rays, and to radium. And how do you think this master of science spends the autumn of his days? In measuring and photographing and analyzing grains of sand.

But those grains are from the most remote sands in the world, the Goodwin Sands, parts of which sunk down the tall ship and all its crew. Some parts of the sands do not act thus, and Sir William Crookes is trying to solve the mystery. He finds that there are two sorts of sands on the Goodwin Sands. There are grains which are perfectly rounded. These are the deadly ones, those are the grains which, soaked with water, yield to pressure and engulf ships. The others are grains with sharp corners, and the particles, and give resistance to pressure. These are the sands which bear up jostled ships.

The last long beam of light of stories about the "music" of the Goodwin Sands, tales which seemed ghostly and fantastic, but the tales were true. We read some time ago of the music given off by the sands of the desert cooling under the effect of rapid radiation of heat, and the Goodwin sands have their "music," their "singing" and "whirring," as it is called. Our friend old M. M. of science is testing the Goodwin Sands and listening to their voices, and when he knows their music he may learn how to save ships from these fearful sands.—My Magazine.

RECOLLECTIONS

Backward, turn backward,
O time in thy flight,
Make me a boy again
Just for a night,
Give me one slice of
The blueberry pie
My mother once made,
The "berry" and "pie."
Please, knock off those decades
And give me a chance
To strut once more in my
First pair of long pants.
Just let me play hooky
And stay out of school,
And plump once again in
The old swatting pool.
Please loosen one moment
Your fettering chain.
And let me enjoy my
"First circus" again.
Just let me go back to
A job that's insignificant,
To that old knothole in
The corner of the fence,
But father's old trunk strap,
I care naught about,
As if you don't mind, you
Can just leave that out.

NOT ROUND OF JOY

Some Few Drawbacks Connected With Simple Life.

Man Who Goes Back to Nature Finds That He Has to Pay the Price.
The Curial of Adam, Laid on Us All.

Back to nature? Well, what about it? For twelve hours out of the twenty-four I am now immolated in a forest near Yashon Heights, bordering the clammy beach, trying to feed the hungry soul of the man who, the while, mopping my streaming brow and getting back my wind. The other, twice hours of the day I am washing, scrubbing, and trying to get the sun-bleached, getting to work, working, and getting back again at evening to prepare the firewood for the evening repast. We would get along fine in this world were it not for the fact that we are obliged to eat.

My poets have lately referred much to nature's wondrous beauty that we are not willing to pay the price. I intend to investigate the matter, but I find the little intimate matters connected with living close to nature take so much of one's time that one has few moments for nature, except, perhaps, if one is profane, to swear at the stinging brush, the beach barnacle, and the thickness of the log one is trying to saw through.

Some day when I get, perhaps, two days' firewood ahead, and the panache flour, butter and bacon, crackers, tea, coffee, bread, etc. all in, if the boat is not waiting for the dock, I intend to lift my weary head from my sodden task, brush the perspiration from my eyes, and absorb some of this beauty of nature that I hear so much about.

Last night I tore away a few segments from wood sawing to get into the waters of the Sound. It was apparent at once that the Sound water is as pure as the water of the lakes, and that its winter freshness has not yet worn off. However, after one is immersed in the water, one gets a little tired, and the water is not so pure as it seems. I saw my way clear to buy my wicker's coal and pay in his life, yet he instructs me how to saw a log, and prepare the firewood and on other reasonable topics, and the only way I can get even with him is to send him two miles after milk, thereby giving me an opportunity to get still closer to nature.

One would greatly enjoy commencing with nature, no doubt, if one had time to commune in this way, these things that were out of date, and many other things that never had been in date, and it determined to make many reforms.

Perhaps the most significant was the one which provided that in future a working knowledge of stenography should be an essential part of the diploma of the student of the law, and surely it is being proved true that the ambassador of the old order passed with the advent of the telegraph and telephone.

Some one once said, indeed, that ambassadors nowadays had become clerks; an exaggeration, of course, but the latest "requirement" leads color to the view—Christian Science Monthly.

Farm Gardens.
The farm garden idea did not start with our entry into the war, but had its inception in 1914, when the Women's Farm Gardens association was formed. At first the association busied itself to obtain positions for women in farms and gardens work. After we got into the war and the danger of a food shortage threatened, the association began work along the lines of the department of agriculture in England, which encouraged the raising of small pieces of land, going so far as to give allotments to those who will till them. The boy scouts and other bodies have done much this year along the line of war gardening.

United States Life Insurance.
The people of the United States carry more than $50,000,000,000 of life insurance, the largest record of any country in the world. Of the $50,000,000,000 is government insurance for soldiers and sailors.—Ladies' Magazine.

Not a Hungry Crocodile.
In the Edinburgh, Scotland, zoo there is a crocodile that is content with a rat or a piece of horseflesh every fortnight. There is an amusing account of the crocodile's surprise at a year ago and has since steadily refused to take food of any kind, an example of "abstention" surpassed, however, by an Indian python which during its thirteen months' stay has not voluntarily taken food.

The Atlantic Record.
The Mauretania of the Cunard Line holds the record for the Atlantic passage, having made the trip from Queenstown to New York on Sept. 11-12, 1919, in four days, ten hours and forty-one minutes.

Enumerators at Work

Enumerators are now at work making up the voters' lists in Toronto, for the referendum to be taken on the Ontario Temperance Act this fall.

The following are entitled to vote on the referendum, and also in the Provincial election next spring:

1st.—Every man of woman who is a British subject and who has resided in Canada twelve months before the 30th day of June last and has resided for thirty days before that date in the constituency.

2nd.—No property qualification whatever is required.

3rd.—All soldiers who have been on actual service, whether overseas or not, and whether 21 years of age or not, should be placed on the list, and friends and relatives of these soldiers should give the enumerators the names of any soldiers not yet returned.

An enumerator is named for each polling division in the town, and a chief enumerator for each riding, and further information can be secured upon application to the chief enumerator for the riding in which you reside. If your name is not on the list you will not be entitled to vote, and it is the duty of all who desire the right to vote to see that their name is handed in to the enumerator for the polling division in which they reside.
