Mr. Hamshaw walked back to Mr. Hartley's, got a lantern and on his way back died suddenly from heart failure. He was between 60 and 70 years of age. Up to two years ago, when he moved to Lang's Corner, he lived at Knottville. His heart had troubled him for some time

LOOK PLEASANT

We cannot of course, all be handsome. And it's hard for us all to be good. We are sure now and then to be lonely. And we don't always do as we should. To be patient is not always easy. To be cheerful is much harder still. But at least we can always be pleasant. If we make up our minds that we will. And it pays every time to be kindly. Although you feel worried and blue. If you smile at the world and look cheerful. The world will smile back at you. So try to be up and look pleasant. No matter how low you spin your wheels. Good humor is always contagious. But you banish your friends when you frown.

DESPISE THE 'HIGHER LIFE'

South Sea Natives Satisfied and Joyous Among the Primitive Surroundings of Their Islands.

Doctor Oster suggested nothing new if he ever said it at all—for down among the South Sea islands the old theories about them pass the period of usefulness.

Martin Johnson showed motion pictures of natives dancing on the newly made graves of the victims of this South Pacific "disease" when he and Mrs. Johnson spoke before the National Geographic society at Washington.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson went "gunning" for the pictures among the numerous unexplored islands which dot the South Pacific, an area that covers a fourth of the globe's surface, and equalling 200,000,000 inhabitants. Of these at least 200,000, Mr. Johnson estimated, still are savage enough to believe the earth is flat, and they never heard of "disease" or "death" or "have been attacked by book agents."

Native dances, which seemed apathetically like the steps of a Broadway chorus, were danced by a palatial of at least a dozen natives, and the complete alpha depicted by the spring-dancing of the "disease" is said to be "disease" which had been introduced by a book agent. The natives, they are speaking terms of lightness, and nothing else, this season.

Mrs. Johnson later of the distinctive variety of "pig" English spoken by the natives, who were in the islands. There are as many as 400 different dialects spoken by the various islands. Mr. Johnson stated, Mrs. Johnson usually made friends with the natives, who were, she naively stated, there probably was little more danger than among the white lights of Broadway. But this, particularly occasionally had its disadvantages.

The pictures showed the four coal-black wives of one native chief, who courteously offered to trade them all for the explorer's wife.

Canibals will exist in many of these islands, and Mr. Johnson showed one picture of natives bearing a huge load to the grave where they observed their ceremonial in connection with their human rotas. A mild background of some of the most beautiful scenery to be found in the world, the speaker said, sets peoples of almost unlikable savagery and ferocity, to whom rotas and magic seem the favorite pastimes.
