WOOL WILL LONG BE SCARCE

Liv's a Pound of Valuable Product Has Been Shortened on Account of the War.
Even with peace it is doubtful if our clothes will return to normal in price or character, until long after the war, writes Douglas Macmillan in Everybody's. The necessity of maintaining the millions of men in khaki and flannel, a population of 100,000,000, is a task which will be a heavy burden on the wool industry for many years to come.
