What Cash You Need When Travelling

—and more particularly, when large sums are required—is best carried in the form of a Letter of Credit, issued by The Merchants Bank.

This old established form of international banking, is preferred by many experienced travellers because of its absolute security.

Letters of Credit are cashed only by banks or banking corporations, and after the identity of the holders is established to the satisfaction of the bank officials. This insures safety, and guards against loss and theft.

CHRISTMAS BELLS
Hark! Hark! I hear a distant bell,
And now a chime—their softly ring.
What joyful tidings do they tell
As back and forth they swing.
'Tis mid of night—who rings those bells?
Perhaps some elves their nest
And while each little boyon swells
And wars, they touch with gentle wing
The tuneful metal, and it feels
'So incanted it would swing
To life, and wake the world with peals
Of gladness for new-erumed
King.

Those midnight bells, how sweet they chime,
The waltz vibrations with their
sound:
To hearts remote they are sublime,
Not spread, they bleed alarm,
around.

Lo! now I see, from East to West
A light shines through the steeples' train.
'Tis brighter than the brightest star.
It glides the bells with golden
flame;
There, too, I see some cherubs
cling
Fast hold the ropes. How fair they be!
They swing the bells and swiftly
sing
'This is the Christ's nativity.'
Wake every heart, join in their song
Of praise to Christ, our new-born
King:
To him our sweetest strains belong,
And his, our richest offering.

When wakes the god of day, and shines
Aloft the heavens, what of
Will wake as well? With box and pine?
And flowers gay, you house will be
Adorned, and while the anthem
swells
With organ's voice, all Christendom
Will vibrate as are those bells
That Christ's nativity has come.

Uncle Josiah's Christmas
By GRAHAM LINGFIELD
Copyright, 1919, by Newspaper Enterprises Co.

Uncle Josiah's Christmas was to be a simple one. He was to leave his home in the country and go to the city for a few days. He was to be with his nephew, Tom, who had just come to the city to start a new business.

"I'll be home in time for the Christmas dinner," Uncle Josiah said as he packed his trunk. "I'll be home in time for the Christmas dinner."

"Well, well, Tom, I'm glad to see you. Suppose we go along and have some dinner together, eh? How would that be?"

"The big young man shook his head. "Sorry, uncle," he said, "but it can't be done. I'm promised somewhere else."

"Mr. Miggas gave him a sly, sidelong glance. "So that's the way the wind blows, eh?"

"You Come Along With Me."
Tom had got to come along and be introduced.

And as Tom was hourly three times as big as Uncle Josiah, he almost lifted his bodily into the street car that happened to be waiting and away they went.

It was with some trepidation that Mr. Miggas followed his nephew into the next little flat where Tom's fiancée lived. He did not feel at all sure of his welcome. He was only in his business clothes, and he knew quite well that his collar was none too fresh. Well it was Tom's fault for dragging him there. He would just say how you do and then escape—escape to his boarding house and—

He found himself encountered in an easy chair in the cosy parlor. There was nobody else about, but sounds from the kitchen indicated that something was busy. Tom took a chair, and then started in to tell him all about it.

Ethel Westcott was a stenographer at Billings & Kent's and Tom had fallen in love with her the very first day he had gone there. She lived alone with her mother, her father having died some years ago, and Tom had hoped to be married very soon, just as soon as he had saved something to start on. Then suddenly Tom sprang up, exclaiming:

"Ethel, uncle, I forgot to buy the cigars," and seizing his hat from the hatstand, fled, leaving Mr. Miggas all by himself in the parlor. For the moment Uncle Josiah did not know whether to jump up and follow Tom or to sit where he was.

The tea was gone, and there was a thing for him to do but to sit still. What an awkward predicament to be in! To be left in a strange house where nobody knew who he was. Supposing somebody were to come in—how was he to explain himself? He was just wondering what an earth he should say, when sure enough footsteps sounded down the passage. They approached the room.

Uncle Josiah looked in his chair. What a sight! Tom was to leave him like that! Suppose—yes, took him for a thief, or something. "Uncle Josiah don't look up! The footsteps were almost at the door. They ceased. Mr. Miggas stared scarcely breathe. He sat as if petrified. What would happen?

Smiling Down at Him as Usual.
The trembling little man screwed up his courage and raised his eyes. For a moment he thought he must have fallen asleep and dreamed of the girl of the boarding.

She was actually there and smiling down at him as usual. The same bright face and curling hair, the merry eyes with the friendly glint in them. Was this Tom's girl? Why, he seemed to have known her all his life. He rose to his feet, a tentative smile on his pale cheeks. He didn't know what to say, but there was no need for the girl to speak. For she said: "Uncle Jos, I'm sure," she smiled. "I've heard Tom speak of you so often."

He waited while she crossed the room to him and took his hands in hers. She stood before him, speaking words of kindness and welcome. "We've been thinking of you and wondering how we could find you. Tom said that you were all alone, and we could not have enjoyed our Christmas thinking that." She stooped and kissed his cheek. Wonderingly Tom's uncle looked at her, tears of gladness in his eyes.

SOWING CHRISTMAS SEED

How the Problem of Storing a Barrel of Apples in a Small New York Apartment Was Solved.

A New York couple recently received a barrel of fine apples from a relative up in the fruit country and were puzzled for a while as to how to store them in the small apartment. As there are only two in the family, it seemed as though they were sure to have some spoiled apples on their hands.

"I might give them away for Christmas," suggested the head of the household.

"That wouldn't do at all," said the wife. "But I'll tell you what we will do. You know, there's a lot of people we know who won't think to send us any presents this year, and the matter to their attention in some way. Now, if I send every one of my baskets a nice barrel of apples this week they'll all remember our existence and we'll get something from almost every one. I'll just do it."

And she did. Now they are looking forward to Christmas with much more certainty and eagerness than usual, and have enough apples left to last as long as they are likely to keep.

"At Attention" Before God.
Paying tribute to the services performed by the British Y. M. C. A., W. Gordon Spriggs, writing in Association Men, the organ of the American "Y," is reminded of the reply made by Field Marshal Sir George White to an inquiry addressed to him at the close of the three months' siege of Ladysmith, South Africa, in the Boer war. Sir George was asked to explain how he maintained his cheerfulness and upheld the spirit and morale of his weary troops amidst so much discomfort, depression and uncertainty. "Because," said the field marshal, "I stand at attention before God every morning so that I may receive my daily marching orders."

Can You Guess Weight?
W. J. Patterson, Georgetown's leading butcher, has secured two extra fine baby beef for the Christmas trade. Now if you are good at guessing you can have a nice 5 or 10 lb. roast free. Every person may have a guess on the weight of each beef, the one coming nearest the actual weight will receive a 10 lb. roast, second nearest a 5 lb. roast. Only one chance to get in on any one beef. Guessing will commence December 20th, and close December 31st. The boxes will be weighed by the Editor of the Herald on January 2nd. 26.
