Radical Reforms to Entrance Exams

Radical reforms in the high school entrance examination system is announced by Hon. F. R. Grant, minister of education. The change takes effect this year. The high school entrance boards under the new plan will be left free to decide whether candidates shall be accepted on the certificates of public school principals or write the examination as usual. The boards will also determine the conditions under which the principals' certificates are to be accepted.

The boards may, in addition, recommend to the minister the admission of candidates who, in their opinions, are fitted for high school work, even though, in certain respects, they do not attain the required standard at the written examination. Moreover those who for adequate reasons were unable to write in the examinations may have their qualifications for admission to high schools considered by the public school inspectors and high school principals at any time.

The above changes involve a considerable alteration and simplification of the existing regulations which will be modified accordingly. The chief complaint has been that admission by public school principals was hampered by a requirement that the promotion examination papers and results had to be submitted to the entrance board, and the result, in the opinion of many, was merely an entrance examination of a different sort. In future the entrance boards may dispense with a set form of examination and accept such recommendations from principals as are deemed satisfactory.
