

"IN THE SPRING"

We expect the sleet and showers,
In the Spring;
And we look for budding flowers,
In the Spring;
We expect the mud and slush,
And the kiddies' painful hush,
As we feed them sulphur mush,
In the Spring.

Couples go for lengthy walks,
In the Spring;
Weddings come from lengthy talks,
In the Spring;
We expect young folks to woo,
Lover-deers and bill and coo—
And by gosh they always do,
In the Spring.

We expect the poet's songs,
In the Spring;
But he sings both loud and long,
In the Spring;
Though he's squeaked most of the year,

Millie grows down all his hair,
In the Spring;
And his song still strifes our ear,
In the Spring.

We look for tailored-clothes,
In the Spring;
And housecleaning—that one path—
In the Spring.

Whily widows seek a spouse,
We watch our old friend, Sol commence
To shine on both sides of the fence,
In the Spring.

We await the rooster's crow,
In the Spring;
For the old bird seems to know,
In the Spring;

That we watch with interest
His far've rib on upon her nest,
While we hope he'll do her best,
In the Spring.

We plan midsummer trips,
In the Spring;
And we sing with eager lips,
In the Spring;

Of the days we're going to spend
"Way up north with some old friend,
But our outings often end"
In the Spring.

We read the base-ball dope,
In the Spring;
And we're full of fannish hope,
In the Spring;

We expect the home-town nine
To win all along the line,
And they sure shape up fine,
In the Spring.

We pay the landlord calls,
In the Spring;
Ask for paper for our walls,
In the Spring;
But he tells a story sad,
And when Fall comes 'round, by god,
Our wallpaper's what he had,
In the Spring.

CAN YOU TELL

Where can a man buy a cap for his knee,
Or a key to the lock of his hair?
Can his eyes be called an academy because there are pupils there?
In the crown of his head
What gems are found?
Who travels the bridge of his nose?
Can he use when shingling the roof of his house,
The nails on the end of his toes?
Can the crook on his elbow be sent to jail?
If so, what did he do?
How does he sharpen his shoulder blades?
If he be hanged if I know, do you?
Can he walk in the shade of the palm of his hand?
Or beat the drum of his ear?
Does the calf of his leg eat the corn of his feet?
If so, why not grow corn on the ear?

Salvation Army
A Strong Force

Makes for Contented Men and Women and for Happy Homes

The Appeal of the Salvation Army for half a million with which to carry on its peculiar and particular work brings again to notice a strong force, not merely in the spiritual realm, but in the case of order and reconstruction.

When war called every class of the Empire into special service the Salvation Army was about the only religious force really prepared to take up the burden. In writing this we ignore neither the Y.M.C.A., nor any other Organization. They did great efforts to make before their organization could expand to the new task, and frequently found themselves at a loss of a new difficulty. According to the men who have served the Salvation Army never failed—and it did not matter, at either rest-camp or base, whether the soldier came in drunk or sober, whether he had money or had squandered every penny on worthless objects. The first principles of William Booth were to get the man from the gutter—and his apostolate carried out the old injunction with new strength—and vigour.

The normal work of the Salvation Army makes for contented men and women, for happy homes, for a strong desire to improve the surroundings, for a mighty pity for the unfortunate and those unfitted for the hard service of life. The Fund which has been built up at Camp Borden will be devoted to rebuilding the edifices of social and religious work which has been largely neglected during the war period, and to making foundations for further developments.

Resolving Camp Borden

For some weeks a company of workmen have been busy at Camp Borden repairing line wires, building and roadways, as well as making some alterations in some buildings in the station area. It has now become apparent that the left in the station camp

The Tire It Pays to Buy

Only the good survive. Time's old scribe strews the way with the worthless and the public ostracizes the failures. Tire standards are ever higher and only the best tires can reach up to it. Tires that survive the ordeal of time and experience are the kind it pays to buy.

Singer Sewing Motor

Changes Any Sewing Machine into a Self Operating Electric

ASK FOR FREE TRIAL

This simple little wonder worker changes any sewing machine (old or new) into an electric self-operating labor-saver. You don't have to pedal. You can do all your sewing without getting the least bit tired.

All you do is guide the sewing, hold your foot still; don't pedal; just press a bit harder to sew faster. Perfect speed control; you can sew a stitch at a time or 800 a minute.

You never touch the wheel, the machine always starts the right way, no jerks, it never breaks the thread, just a silent steady motion that adapts the moment you remove your foot from the self-starter.

You can make all your own clothes and get more of them and better material for less money.

You can save the cost of the Singer Sewing Motor in less than one month's use.

Curious Marriage Ends War Romance

One of the strangest of war romances was ended, or perhaps just advanced another stage, on Sunday, February 8, when in a little Massachusetts town, Miss Emily Knowles, of England, became the wife of Guy B. Spiker, of Baltimore. One of the witnesses to the ceremony was Miss Knowles' little baby, whose father is the brother of the groom. Thereby hangs the tale which has excited interest on two continents. It has made famous one of the most remarkable women who ever have figured in those eternal triangles, as they are called by the moralists, who are the strategists. She is Mrs. Percy Spiker. For an author to have introduced her as a character of fiction would seem to insult the intelligence of readers. They would have said: "Hedda Gabler's husband said at the moment his wife committed suicide. 'People don't do those things.' Why, many forlorn husbands who have been unfaithful, but they don't offer to conduct their own stand boldly forth as the one undivided friend of the other woman. They don't, for a fact, but Mrs. Spiker does it. She is a woman who has attracted such general interest to the romance.

The villain in the piece is Percy Spiker, of Baltimore, lieutenant in the American overseas force. How great a villain he is we do not know, at least the total of virtue of himself and his wife ought to make them out a good deal better than their neighbors. When Lieut. Spiker was in England he met Emily Knowles, then a girl of eighteen or more, with her or whether he merely amused himself with her is a matter of doubt. Apparently the girl was always aware that her husband was in the United States. Nevertheless, she permitted herself to fall in love with him and take a course of self-solicitation. Their brief honeymoon was interrupted when he returned to the United States. Time passed and she was left a widow. When Lieut. Spiker was in England he met Emily Knowles, then a girl of eighteen or more, with her or whether he merely amused himself with her is a matter of doubt. Apparently the girl was always aware that her husband was in the United States. Nevertheless, she permitted herself to fall in love with him and take a course of self-solicitation. Their brief honeymoon was interrupted when he returned to the United States. Time passed and she was left a widow.

She thought of the girl in England and of the baby. So she wrote to Miss Knowles and asked her to let her which to buy passage to the United States. Yes, to the United States, not to Geneva. Miss Knowles arrived at a pretty, white-haired, or, at least, light-hair, she communicated with the baby's father in. What either then or afterwards told his wife, what he had committed in England. Mrs. Spiker is a woman to whom it would be a pleasure to confess sins. What she said to her husband, which was not revealed, but it was not her husband, she perceived, whose affairs were of the first importance.

What she said to her husband, which was not revealed, but it was not her husband, she perceived, whose affairs were of the first importance.

At this point another heroic figure enters. This is Mr. Guy Spiker, brother of the groom. He offered to marry Miss Knowles. He admitted that at first he took this chivalrous step in order to help his brother, and in order that the baby should be the name of Spiker which appears to have been a considerable object, and while the name Spiker was not given at first place the most desirable, remember a couple of people who bear it. Miss Knowles, however, she offered and finally accepted. She confessed that in the past couple of weeks she has become very fond of Guy Spiker, and Guy says that while at first he wanted to marry Emily for Percy's sake, latterly he wanted her for his own. This was the marriage that was celebrated at Fall River. At the end of the ceremony, the groom remarked to a newspaper reporter who was one of the witnesses:

"I think I could write the last line of your story for you to-day. 'Please do,'" said the reporter.

"And they lived happily ever after," said Guy Spiker.

It is to be hoped they do, and are permitted to sink into comfortable prosperity. As for Mrs. Percy Spiker, she says she never had the slightest intention of divorcing her husband.
