THE DEBT OF HONOR

Our nation's debts are piling up, the war debt is immense. But one great debt we have to pay regardless of expense, and that is the debt we owe the men who fought for us and bled, and who for healthy living limbs wear wooden ones instead.

It is the debt we owe the men who come with broken lives, To struggle once again to keep their children and their wives; Among the darkened homes of these the famine-spectre stalks.

And daily in the streets and squares we pass them in our walks.

In Canada's so-called and blind who cannot hear and see

The mute appeal of proud, brave men and children at the knee, And suffering women pinched and starved in houses cold and bare.

While wealth and ease go rolling by without a thought of care? Across the sodden plains of death these men have charged and fought;

They bore the agony and strain and our salvation wrought? They did not avert, they did not flinch, but on and on they pressed

Till in the rain of splintering shells came one that gave them rest.

Shall we, then, now forget the past in selfishness and ease? And say they have no claim on us, such glorious men as these?

If on a nation's throne to-day our country takes her seat, It is the work of broken men that pass us in the street.

Bestow not on the head your praise, they heed it not above, The men who live and suffer still are they who need your love;

The very slanders cry out to us, too long have we delayed, The debt of honor faces us and that debt must be paid.

Ontario's New Marriage Act

Arrangements are fast being completed at the Parliament Buildings for the enforcement about October 1 of the radical changes in Ontario's Marriage Act, enacted at the last session of the Legislature. On or about that date the privilege of solemnizing marriages is to be taken out of the hands of the jewelers, who have so long held it, and vested with Municipal Clerks. And a provision, less well known, is that only duly registered clergymen of recognized denominations may legally perform the marriage ceremony.

Heads of the larger Church denominations have already sent in to the Provincial Department of Health for registration a list of their ministers throughout the Province. The imperativeness of Church boards according to registration proceedings is being pointed out by Dr. J. W. B. McCullough, who reminded the Globe yesterday that there is a penalty clause in the new amendment which provides that any minister registered and ordained by the Provincial Secretary who solemnizes or undertakes to solemnize any marriage shall incur a penalty of $300, and also shall be liable to imprisonment for not exceeding twelve months.

Undoubtedly the new provisions in the act will prohibit performing the marriage ceremony by ministers outside the larger Church denominations. In past times have been permitted to officiate. Before Confederation the original Marriage Act gave ministers of all recognized denominations the right to marry. This law gave the right to the Anglicans, Baptists, Congregationalists, Jews, Methodists, Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. Since then, by act of Legislature, there have been added to the list the Salvation Army, Disciples of Christ, Farrington Independents, Society of Friends, and the Brothers.

According to the general understanding of the act, however, ministers of other denominations cannot comply with the registration order and cannot hereafter perform marriages. All such ministers should find out where they stand under the new act before attempting to perform the marriage ceremony.

Section 2 of the amendments passed last session gives power to the Provincial Secretary to issue to ministers of any denomination or Church authorities on their behalf, certificates of registration, and stipulates that, where it is apparent that any person registered has ceased to possess the qualifications entitling him to be registered, he may annul such registration and revoke his authority to perform marriages.

Section 3 of the amendment, by changing the words, extends the right to perform marriages to properly ordained clergymen. Section 4 vests with the Clerk of every city, town and incorporated village, and every Police Magistrate having jurisdiction in territory without municipal organization, the right to issue marriage licenses. Section 5 permits such duly appointed issuer to appoint deputy or deputies to act for him, a provision needed for the case of larger municipalities. Section 9 places the license fee at $5, of which sum $4 is to be remitted to the Provincial Treasurer and the cost of $1 retained by the issuer or deputy issuer.

Section 6 of the amendment, by changing the words, extends the right to perform marriages to properly ordained clergymen. Section 4 vests with the Clerk of every city, town and incorporated village, and every Police Magistrate having jurisdiction in territory without municipal organization, the right to issue marriage licenses. Section 5 permits such duly appointed issuer to appoint deputy or deputies to act for him, a provision needed for the case of larger municipalities. Section 9 places the license fee at $5, of which sum $4 is to be remitted to the Provincial Treasurer and the cost of $1 retained by the issuer or deputy issuer.

Section 7 of the amendment, by changing the words, extends the right to perform marriages to properly ordained clergymen. Section 4 vests with the Clerk of every city, town and incorporated village, and every Police Magistrate having jurisdiction in territory without municipal organization, the right to issue marriage licenses. Section 5 permits such duly appointed issuer to appoint deputy or deputies to act for him, a provision needed for the case of larger municipalities. Section 9 places the license fee at $5, of which sum $4 is to be remitted to the Provincial Treasurer and the cost of $1 retained by the issuer or deputy issuer.

Section 8 of the amendment, by changing the words, extends the right to perform marriages to properly ordained clergymen. Section 4 vests with the Clerk of every city, town and incorporated village, and every Police Magistrate having jurisdiction in territory without municipal organization, the right to issue marriage licenses. Section 5 permits such duly appointed issuer to appoint deputy or deputies to act for him, a provision needed for the case of larger municipalities. Section 9 places the license fee at $5, of which sum $4 is to be remitted to the Provincial Treasurer and the cost of $1 retained by the issuer or deputy issuer.

Section 9 of the amendment, by changing the words, extends the right to perform marriages to properly ordained clergymen. Section 4 vests with the Clerk of every city, town and incorporated village, and every Police Magistrate having jurisdiction in territory without municipal organization, the right to issue marriage licenses.
