SUNSHINE. On the darkest day of winter. We can sense the coming spring. Some day, cold and gloom will vanish. And the birds begin to sing. After longest night—there's morning. Fill the passing hour with song. And no darkness can appal you. Or no waiting-time seem long. "Every Cloud," how oft we've heard it. Let us like the bird-man be, Soar above, and get the sunshine Soaring souls alone can see.

What Do Your Eyes Tell? If, while gazing at the lovelight in each other's eyes, sweethearts can spare the time, they may each learn something about the other's character. Authorities say of black eyes: They are usually lively, penetrative, and brisk, and prove a person to be of lively wit, sprightly conversation, not easily imposed upon, of a sound understanding, apt to his, often easily led by outside influence, selfish, desirous of absorbing the time and attention of a friend, and jealous. Haughty black eyes are said to indicate a dominating power. The brown-eyed man is the best provider; and the blue-eyed man the most often henpecked. A true grey eye denotes, it is said, that the person is of rather weak intellect, devoid of wit, but a plain, plodding honest drudge. Greenish grey eyes, with light streaks coming and going, denote intellectuality, impulsiveness, impressionableness, and love of poetry and art. Grey-blue, clear, steadfast eyes show a serene and confident nature. Pale blue eyes with a shifting motion show dishonor and deceit. Dark blue eyes with a violet tint indicate purity and a great power of affection. Blue eyes with a green tint show a choleric disposition. When angry they look red. Blue eyes streaked with unequal orange or yellow flashes show the owner to be quite different from other folk—original and uncommon. Green eyes are deceitful and are the eyes of coquetry. Light brown eyes are inconstant; brown eyes with a green tint show an irritable disposition. Brown eyes are mischief-makers, it is said. A hazel eye indicates a subtle, piercing, and frolisome nature, inclined to be arch and mischievous, though good-natured at heart. The worst eyes of all are citron colored or yellowish eyes. Beware! A cold, indolent, selfish disposition accompanies a feebly tinted or colorless eye. British eyes are a proof of good health and a happy outlook on life. People who talk well and love to talk usually have large eyes. Dark eyes suggest deep and strong emotions. If your eyes change color, as from grey to black or blue to brown, it is said to be a lucky sign. A person who winks rapidly advertises a quick temper. A cast or droop in the eye cannot be trusted. A wild expression of the eye, especially if the whole pupil is exposed, is a sign of insanity. Projecting, rolling eyes belong to people who are not genuine. Eyes deep sunk in the head are those of a jealous, distrustful, envious, malicious nature. Large eyes in a small face indicate curiosity. Eyes close together near the bridge of the nose indicate meanness and unworthiness. A shifting eye denotes dishonesty. Soft, languid eyes show a voluptuous nature. Never make a confidant of one who keeps his eyes almost closed; half-shut eyes show shrewdness and a lack of sincerity. A squinty eye is a penurious but honest eye. Oblique eyes are cunning and deceitful. Eyes which have an inquisitive expression and then, when addressing a person, an exceedingly kind expression are not to be trusted. If your right eye keeps twitching, the superstitious say that it means good news; your left, misfortune. If both twitch at the same time you will hear from a long-lost friend. His Consolation. Two Scots met in a restaurant. "It's a long while since I saw you, Jock," the first said. "Aye," the other answered. "I'm married since I saw you last, Alec." "Married!" exclaimed Alec. "Man, that's good—that's very good!" "Ouch! no so good," said Jock. "The wife's got a temper." "The wife's got a temper? Goash! but that's bad. That's awfu' bad." "No so bad," Jock went on. "She's got hooses." "Mercy on us!" said Alec, "but that's good." The wife's got hooses? That's terrible good." "No so good," said Jock. The hooses is burned." "Titi! Alec signed. "The hooses is burned! That's bad! That's bad!" "No so bad," Jock murmured. "The wife was burned, too."

Gems With Magic Powers. Do you believe in the magic powers of precious stones? It is a belief dating back to the ancients that the gift of eloquence is bestowed by the sardonyx. A DIsraeli wore a ring set with this jewel upon all occasions when he wished to electrify auditors and win new adherents to his cause. A certain royal princess wears a ring set with jet as one of her talismans. It is supposed to possess singular efficacy in preserving health. The ancient theory regarding jet was that if powdered and mixed with wine it was a sovereign remedy for toothache. The Shah of Persia is never without his cube of amber, which he wears around his neck. It is said to possess the power of rendering its wearer invulnerable. The late Czar of Russia wore a ring in which he believed was embedded a piece of the true Cross. Once while traveling from Petrograd to Moscow he found that he had forgotten his ring. The train was stopped, and a messenger was sent back for it. Then there is "the ring of death" in Spain. This fatal ring hangs about the neck of the patron Saint of Madrid in one of the most beautiful parks of the Spanish capital. It is of pearls and diamonds, but there is no special provision made for watching it, as the Spaniards prefer to give it a wide berth. The story of the ring is a tragic one. It was made for the father of the present king, and he presented it to his son upon the day of their betrothal. Her married life was short. Queen Christina, the king's grandmother, next wore the ring. She died shortly after, and the king gave it to his sister, Infanta del Pilar, who died within a month. The ring then passed to a daughter of the Duc de Orleans and less than three months later she also died. Since that time it has been known as the ring of death.

Sandy's Bargain. A Scottish farmer, who for twenty years had supplied a neighbor with a weekly consignment of a dozen eggs, discovered one week that thirteen had been sent in mistake. He called on the customer and demanded another twopenny or his egg back. "Don't be so mean," said the customer. "Good heavens, man, I've been dealing with you for years. Surely you can give me an egg without making a fuss about it?" "But the farmer wouldn't budge. "Look here," said the customer, "I'm not going to encourage your mean habits. I won't give you the egg, but I'll give you a drink instead. What will you have?" "Egg and milk," said the farmer.

America's "Baptismal Font." An American educator has been trying to buy, as a Franco-American memorial, a building that few Americans ever heard of, though it has been called the "baptismal font of America." It is the house in Saint Die, on the Meurthe river, about sixty miles from the old German frontier, in which, in 1870, the name America was first put upon the printed page and engraved upon the map. In the same neighborhood soldiers of the first separate American unit wrote the name of their country in their blood. Alcohol as Locomotive Fuel. From Pernambuco in Brazil comes the news that there are approximately 80 modern cane-sugar factories, which have about 800 miles of railway, of from 0.75 to a 1 meter gauge, operated at present by wood-burning locomotives. The fuel problem, however, is becoming a serious one, and as a result the sugar-mill operators are turning their attention to reducing wood consumption and finding substitutes. Consequently great interest is being shown in the substitution of alcohol, which is produced in large quantities. Nothing to... The... fortunate... ment that... always came... streaky. LINCOLN SHOT WELL

His Humor Shows Brightly at Test of Spicier Rifle. The Scientific American gives a true story of Lincoln contributed by Mr. Christopher N. Spencer, now 78 years old, who was the inventor of practically the first repeating rifle. He taps were as much in evidence during the Civil War as in the Mexican war. Through the influence of James G. Blain and President Lincoln, the new arm which did much to crush the Confederacy was adopted. Mr. Spencer's account of the test is a true contribution to both biography and history. He says: "On the way to the President's stop in front of the War Department and sent Robert to ask Mr. Stanton, the Secretary of War, to come with us. While we were waiting Mr. Lincoln told us some good stories, and, noticing that one of the pockets of his black alpaca coat was torn, he took a pin from his waistcoat and proceeded to mend it, saying, laughingly: 'It seems to me that this does not look quite right for the chief magistrate of this mighty republic.' Robert reported that Mr. Stanton was too busy to accompany us. 'Well,' said the President, 'they do pretty much as they have a mind to over there.' The target was a board about six inches wide and three feet long, with a black spot painted at each end. The rifle contained six 10-calibre, rim-fire, copper cartridge. Mr. Lincoln's first shot was to the left and five inches low, but the next shot hit the bull's-eye and the other two were placed close around it. "Now," said Mr. Lincoln, 'we will see the inventor try it.' The board was reversed and I did some what better than the President. 'Well,' he said, 'you are younger than I am and have a better eye and steadier nerve.'"
