STAGED BY A. C. DALE, THE BARGAIN WIZARD AT JACKSON'S for you on the square. That is the policy I have always tried to live up to. It's the policy that always wins out. It has got many a business man out of a tight corner, it is going to get me out of mine. Here is my trouble, my lease has expired on a portion of the Building we occupy, in fact it has been sold, which cut us out of a lot of room. Entire stock has to be re-arranged and find ourselves loaded to the guards with merchandise and no place to put it, which to be frank has not been moving as it should. I am in a tight box, but not so tight that I can't get out. I've got to sell one-half of this huge stock at prices that will do the selling alone without the aid of another thing - I'll do it; I'll sell at a mere fraction of to-day's prices. I reserve nothing. These are Mr. Jackson's own words to me. I have taken him at his word. Everyone with an eye for economy will come. Never before has there been such a disregard for profit and original cost. With such price cutting abandon, never before have you been privileged to effect such timely economics. Merchandise of the first grade quality at prices actually an insult to the quality given you for economy.—A. C. DALE, the Bargain Wizard.
